LIGHTING CONTRACT TO EXPIRE JAN. 1

Is Proposed by Council at Instance of Alderman Martin—Board Tables Gill's Plan For Refund of Tax on Bank Stock.

Alderman William B. Martin of the Twelfth ward, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for mayor this fall, is very anxious that the incoming administration shall have the privilege of signing a new street lighting contract with the Kingston Gas & Electric Company, and at the regular monthly meeting of the common council Tuesday evening he introduced a resolution that if the board of public works sign a new contract with the electric company for street lighting that it shall not be extended over January 1, 1924.

Alderman Cashman of the Third ward took exception to the resolution and said that the board of public works was handling the matter and the council's policy should be that of "hands off." He said the men on the board of public works would not waste the taxpayers' money but were proceeding carefully in the matter. He said that Alderman Ryan of the Thirteenth ward and himself had seen Commissioner Oppenheimer of the board of upblic works the other evening and the commissioner had informed them that the electric company refused to install any more new lights until a contract was signed, and that the aldermen were only wasting time introducing resolutions for lights until a new contract was in force.

Alderman Martin said that was news to him for he had never heard of the electric company refusing to install new lights when notified to do so.

"Getting Ready to Sign."

"Well, that is what Commissioner Oppenheimer told us," retorted Alderman Cashman. The alderman from the Third also said that the commissioner had informed Alderman Ryan and himself that the board was about to sign a new contract with the electric company.

"That's just the point," said Alderman Martin "and I believe that the matter should be left to the incoming administration, whether it be Democratic or Republican, the new mayor whoever he may be should not come into office the first of the year and find his hands tied with a long term lighting contract. That's my reason for introducing this resolution requesting the board of public works not to sign a contract for longer than the first of the year."

Alderman Everett of the Eleventh ward, said that he did not favor a short term contract as he believe it would cost more to sign a contract for the remaining four months of the year, and he doubted if the electric company would sign such a contract.

After considerable discussion the vote on the Martin resolution was taken and it was carried with but few dissenting votes.

Must Refund Taxes.

Corporation Counsel Walter N. Gill submitted a report stating that the Court of Appeals of the state had decided that assessment and taxation on stock of national banks since the enactment of the Income Tax law is illegal. An agreement has been made between most municipalities of the state and the national banks located therein to refund one-half of the taxes paid based upon assessments made in 1920-21-22 without interest and for the discontinuance of all pending litigation without costs.

The corporation counsel said that he had held a conference with representatives of Kingston's national banks and they asserted their willingness to enter into a similar agreement, and he recommended that the city enter into such an agreement with the local banks and that the mayor be authorized on behalf of the city to execute, sign seal and deliver the same together with all other papers necessary to terminate the pending litigation.

Alderman Cashman moved that the matter be tabled until the special meeting August 21, when the aldermen would have more information on the subject and be able to vote more intelligently. The motion was adopted.

Lighter Blasts Uptown.

In regard to the matter of the heavy blasts set off in the state quarry at the head of North Front street the matter was taken up with the highway department and a letter received from D. V. Z. Bogart, county assistant engineer, in which he wrote that he had notified the quarrymen to load lighter and shoot with more care.

Chief Wood Reports.

Chief of Police Wood also filed a report with the council relative to auto busses obeying the state law requiring them to stop when approaching a railroad crossing and then proceeding when it was seen the crossing was clear. The chief at the request of the aldermen had taken the matter up with Frank Ferraro who was said to be disregarding this ruling at the Flatbush avenue crossing, and he had promised to see that his drivers observed the law in that respect. A letter was also read from the public service commission regarding the matter and stating it would be taken up with Mr. Ferraro.

Motions And Resolutions.

The following resolutions were introduced and referred to the proper boards and committees:

By Alderman Beichert—That grade be established on TenBroeck avenue, between O'Neil and Cornell streets, and catch basin be placed in center of that block; that catch basin be placed at corner of Ardsley street and Tremper avenue; that catch basin be placed at corner of Wiltwyck avenue and O'Neil street; that O'Neil street be paved with asphalt from Broadway to Foxhall avenue, and that concrete block between Broadway and railroad crossing on that street, be removed and asphalt substituted; that Wiltwyck avenue be graded between Downs street and Albany avenue; that Manor avenue be repaired where sewer was placed.

By Alderman Cashman—That Tubby street be graded and sewer laid.

By Alderman Ryan—That council meet in special session August 21, to designate polling places.

By Alderman Kullmann—That catch basin be placed at corner of McEntee street and Adams street; that ruts and gutters be repaired on West Pierpont street and Montrepose avenue.

By Alderman Joy—That St. Mary's street and Newkirk avenue be repaired; that guard rail on high road be repaired.

By Alderman Keating—That topdressing which is being removed from Abruyn street be placed on some of the side streets in that vicinity; that North street, from Delaware avenue to Beach street, be oiled.

By Alderman Ryan—That a drain pipe be laid in front of property at 373 Abeel street.

By Alderman Macholdt—That West Chester street be oiled; that Mary's avenue be placed in passable condition; that a water main be placed in Mary's avenue, between Andrew and Ohio streets; that Mary's avenue be oiled, that Andrew street be fixed as it was full of holes.

By Alderman Martin—That Washington avenue between North Front street and the viaduct be repaired; that trolley road has not repaired roadbed between tracks on Washington avenue; that the work be done by the city and charged to the trolley company; that the street in front of the Schepmoes property on Linderman avenue be filled in; that chief of police notify bus drivers to hold to speed limit between Pearl and Green streets and the uptown terminal and that the regulation regarding the use of cut outs be observed and all unnecessary blowing of horns be eliminated; that board of public works take some action toward raising sidewalk on viaduct as it was in dangerous condition.

By Alderman Everett—That an arc light be placed on Marius street at the entrance to the Donovan development.

The council then adjourned. All of the aldermen were present at the meeting.

ROTARY TO REQUEST BUSINESS SUSPENSION FRIDAY AFTERNOON

The Rotary Club, at its luncheon today, after a full discussion of the matter, adopted a resolution requesting all business houses that can possibly do so, to close at noon on Friday as a token of respect to the late President of the United States, whose funeral and interment take place in Marion, Ohio, on that afternoon.

The officials of the Chamber of Commerce also request that all business houses close Friday afternoon.

TWO MEMORIAL SERVICES FRIDAY; BUSINESS TO HALT

Uptown Churches to Unite at First Dutch While Downtown Congregations Will Meet at Wurts Street Baptist Church—Big Stores and Factories to Close.

Gradually, as details regarding the funeral services for the late president, Warren G. Harding, become known, plans are being made in Kingston for cessation of business activities and the holding of memorial services in his honor.

The consistory of the First Dutch Church and the Kingston Ministerial Association, pursuant to the intention expressed in Tuesday's Freeman, have arranged for a union memorial service in memory of President Harding, to be held at that church on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The following churches will unite with the First Dutch: The Fair Street Reformed, St. James's, the First Presbyterian, St. John's Episcopal, the First Baptist Church of Albany avenue, the Church of the Comforter at Wiltwyck, the Franklin Street A. M. E. Zion Church, St. Mark's A. M. E. Church.

This is in keeping with the time honored custom in Kingston, there having been a service at the First Dutch n memory of every president from Washington to Roosevelt. The consistory extend a cordial invitation to all residents of Kingston, and to visitors to the city or its vicinity, regardless of race or denominational distinction, to unite in this service. Judge Clearwater will preside and the order of services will be as follows:

Invocation.
Hymn—Lead Kindly Light ..... Congregation.
Scripture — Twenty-third Psalm, Micah, sixth chapter, eighth verse; Revelations, twenty-second chapter, first to fifth verses.
Prayer, the Rev. Putnam Cady, D. D., of the First Presbyterian Church.
Hymn—Nearer My God to Thee ... Congregation.
Benediction—The Rev. Ebenezer O. Clarke, of the Franklin Street A. M. E. Zion Church.

WILSON RIDES IN PROCESSION

From White House To Capitol—Too Weak and Ill to Attend Ceremonies At Either End of Route.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Woodrow Wilson, former president, a broken, silent man, came out of his forced retirement today to join with the nation in paying a last tribute to Warren Gamaliel Harding.

He left the quiet solitude of his home in S street to participate in the great state funeral ceremonies for the man who succeeded him in the highest office of the land.

Unheeding the advices of physicians who feared the trip would be too much for him, Mr. Wilson braved the heavy ordeal, because, as he said himself in a letter to President Coolidge, "I shall esteem it an honor to take part in the funeral procession." But he participated only to the extent of riding down Pennsylvania avenue from the White House to the Capitol behind the heavily draped, slow moving artillery caisson that carried the body of the late president.

His own precarious health, shattered, too in the service of country, prevented him from attending the impressive brief services under the historic dome of the Capitol.

When Mr. Wilson's automobile carrying also Mrs. Wilson, and his aide, Admiral Grayson, reached capitol hill, it turned slowly through the saddened throngs and returned him again to the seclusion of the S street home.

Only twice before—when he rode with President Harding in the inaugural procession on that March 4, 1921 and at the services in honor of the Unknown Soldier on armistice day, 1921, had the former president participated in public ceremonies since leaving the White House, where, all during the war, he had guided America.

Mr. Wilson was assigned a position in the second section of the funeral procession, close behind the caisson and the automobile carrying Mrs. Harding. Not a word did he utter; he was bowed low in grief.

The former president, sallow, pale and drawn, emerged from the side door of the S street house at 9:28 a. m. Two attendants were at his side. He limped noticeably and had to be almost lifted into the rear seat of his automobile. His left shoulder sagged deeply and his left arm was limp. In his right hand he carried a heavy walking stick. Scarcely turning his head he took a seat at the right side of his automobile. He was dressed in a heavy black suit of mourning, with a high silk hat.

Mrs. Wilson, in a dress of mourning, took a seat next to the former president. Admiral Grayson also was in the car.

Escorted by two motorcycle policemen the former president's car moved slowly to the White House to join the funeral cortege.

Persons along the route when they noticed him bared their heads and held their hats over their hearts. There was not a word spoken on the trip. The former president only twice acknowleiged the crowds along the route, each time with a nervous bow of his head.

While heavy lines were under his eyes and furrowed his pale face, he held his head rigidly erect. There was a slight droop at the corner of his mouth, which was firmly set.

Outside the White House grounds the Wilson car passed through long lines of troops who were drawn up for the funeral procession.

As he passed officers saluted and men snapped quickly to attention. Mr. Wilson responded with a touch of his hat.

The machine swung into the White House grounds at 9:35 o'clock coming to a stop on the gravel roadway in front of the north portico. A squad of cameramen immediately rushed forward with requests for him to pose. The former president bowed toward the crowds while the cameras clicked.

When Wilson's presence out in the roadway became known Senator Ball, Republican, of Delaware came out of the White House to welcome him. The senator apparently carried to the former president a message from Mrs. Harding. Owing to his illness, Mr. Wilson made no effort to enter the White House but sat waiting in his car for the funeral procession to start.

Auto Bus Hit a Pole.

It was reported to the police this afternoon that about 1 o'clock the Greenkill Park bus struck a telephone pole on Abeel street, near the old Murphy boatyard. At the time the bus and the Ford delivery truck of the Thompson packing house, driven by Fred Stoudt of Connelly, collided and the bus left the road, ramming the pole. No one was hurt.

Jordan's Bus Burned.

Monday night one of the big auto busses used by Martin Jordan on the New Paltz-Kingston route was badly wrecked by fire on the Rifton road.

Impressive Services At Capitol Concluded, Thousands Pass Body As It Lies In State

Private Service For Harding Family In East Room Of White House Precedes Procession To Capitol—Representatives Of All Walks Of Life, Fraternal, Civic And Military Organizations In Line—Multitude Grieves Silently As Death Caisson Rumbles By, Pershing Leading Way.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 8.—America spoke her grief today at the passing of a well-beloved son, the twenty-ninth president of the United States—spoke it in a pageantry of sorrow, spoke it in an outpouring of silent emotion, spoke it in tones of majestic reverence such as the nation has seldom heard.

Government officials and representatives of the several states began assembling at the White House to form the solemn cortege early as 9 o'clock. The first to arrive was Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, with his aides. Pinchot was followed by the senate committee of honorary pall bearers, led by Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, president pro tem of the senate.

By the time members of the diplomatic corps, garbed in dress uniform, began to arrive, there was a ceaseless stream of officials moving into the grounds.

The actual start of the cavalcade of sorrow came at 10:17 a. m., more than a quarter of an hour late. The delay was caused by the labors of the military pall bearers in strapping the flag draped casket to the caisson. With the crunch of wheels on the gravel roadway, the cavalcade swung slowly down through the executive grounds and into the historic avenue.

Then there was a crunching of gravel as six smooth chestnut horses swept up the great rounded drive to the main entrance of the mansion. They drew a grim black, polished artillery caisson on which from time immortal heroes have ridden to their last long sleep.

Out on the still air of the morning there floated to the street stirring strains of the "President's Call" from a lone bugler.

Inside the great East Room of the White House, where in normal times the tourists flock by day and at night there are brilliant social functions, a dozen stalwart service men, grave faced, stepped forward to the center of the room.

There on a catafalque, squarely beneath the great glass chandelier, there rested the metalled flag-draped casket. Tenderly they lifted it, and slowly they treaded their way across the glazed floor, through the wide portals and across the broad piazza where the restless horses champed and pawed.

Somewhere in the distance, the army band softly broke into a funeral march, weirdly, though sweetly, and conveying something of the matchless majesty of death.

The flag covered casket slid noiselessly on the caisson, a low voiced order was given and down the great circular drive beneath the stately, drooping elms, Warren G. Harding started on his last ride up the avenue which had seen his greatest triumph.

There was a momentary halt as the cavalcade of sorrow swung into the broad bosom of the avenue.

Then the lead was taken by General John J. Pershing, astride "Jeff," his famous mount. Following close behind came his staff, the metal of the horses' shoes beating a sharp staccato on pavement as they swung into movement.

At the last moment and just after the procession started from the White House, Mrs. Harding was prevailed upon to avoid the ordeal of driving slowly down the avenue in the funeral cortege. Accordingly her car was slipped out of the procession, and guarded by outriders of police and secret service men, taken directly to the capitol. There she waited the arrival of the funeral party.

The cavalcade of sorrow deposited its honored dead at the nation's capital at 11:20 a. m. The slow, mournful journey down historic Pennsylvania avenue midst crowded sidewalks of sorrowing citizens, took 63 minutes. The mortal remains of the president were then carried up the broad east entrance into the rotunda for the funeral service.

The services in the capitol were brief ending at 12:01 p. m. Mrs. Harding, President and Mrs. Coolidge were the first to depart while the other mourners slowly filed around the catafalque before leaving the rotunda.

All that a great and powerful people can do to show their veneration and their respect for a departed leader was done here today in the national capitol for Warren G. Harding. All the homage and sorrow that is in the nation's heart was laid today at his silent feet. And in the performance there was written a chapter across the pages of the republic's history that shall be forever green in the memories of men.

Hardly had a torpid sun swung quarter way across the smoky sky, when the great black gates of the White House swung wide and all that remains of Warren G. Harding came forth from his last night under its broad roof into the hands of the people, and thence through endless lanes of a bowed and reverential citizenry to where the dome of the capitol showed mistily against the foggy heavens.

And there under the great dome which has covered but a few of the nation's heroes, reverent hands laid his body, wrapped only in the glorious mantle of the flag, on its catafalque that the rich and the poor, the mighty and the small, might pass by his bier and mourn him to his grave.

Historic Pennsylvania avenue, which has echoed to the sadness of Lincoln's cortege, the triumphant tramp of Grant's men, home from the wars, the grief that attended the passing of Garfield and McKinley, reverberated today to the marching of those who did honor to Harding—home at last after a three thousand mile journey that Caesar might well have envied.

It was down this same broad avenue, but 29 months ago that Warren G. Harding rode to the greatest honor that can come to man, the presidency of the greatest republic on earth. Then he was filled with the flush of life, vigorous, alert, keen and anxious to get at the great tasks ahead of him. Beside him that bleak March day rode a man who was relinquishing the same honored position, shrunken, white-faced, lame, a victim of the terrible toll that America exacts of her high servants. Today that same white-faced man, Woodrow Wilson, rode behind Warren G. Harding to the shrine of the nation's departed great.

Then the avenue had been gay, boisterous, its buildings afire with flags and bunting, and the acclaim that came to Warren G. Harding that day brought a rich red flush to his tanned face, and a twisted smile to the face of the man who rode beside him. Today the avenue was silent as the tomb, its buildings draped with black, and the brilliant colorings of the flags and the bunting dimmed by the crepe that swung dead in the hot lifeless air.

There was, however, the same acclaim. But where before it had been the acclaim for the hopeful living, today it was the silent acclaim for the revered dead.

The same faces were to be seen on the avenue today that were there that cold March day, 29 months ago. There were men, grave, silent, bareheaded and respectful. There were women, sombre of dress, and frankly tearful. There were children, wide-eyed and tearful, too, for the man who had allowed them to roll eggs on his lawn at Easter-tide.

The avenue today resounded to the mournful dirge of the dead. Twice now in the last quarter century it has vibrated with the slow cadence of marching men, bound on a sad, stern duty of bidding fitting farewell to a departed president.

In the great procession which marked the final passing of Warren G. Harding from the White House to the capitol today and his passing, too, from the stage of world affairs, were all manner of men. There were the great of the nation and the small.

There was the new president, Calvin Coolidge, slim, reddish haired, his face reflecting already the realization of what awful burdens have suddenly been set astride his narrow shoulders by an inscrutable fate.

There were two past presidents of the republic, Taft and Wilson. The years have passed but lightly touched the former since he last went up the avenue. They have weighed heavily on the lame, white-faced, other one.

There was a saddened and utterly grief-stricken woman, Mrs. Harding, strangely small in her garb of heavy black mourning, and yet pathetically brave in a manner that has challenged the admiration of the nation. She was the cynosure of tear-wet eyes of all who could see and hear and feel.

Behind her carriage came other relatives of the dead president—two sisters, Miss Abigail Harding—"Daisy" the president called her—and Mrs. E. E. Remsberg of California, who made the journey across the continent on the funeral train; nieces and others.

There was the general of all the armies, John J. Pershing, powerful and soldierly looking, astride his nervous mount. There were saddened members of the cabinet, four of whom had been with the chief when he sickened and died on the far west coast; there were justices of the supreme court, solemn looking in their official garb; grief stricken members of the senate, who had served with him in the tempestuous days before he attained his high place; members of the house of representatives; veterans of all the wars America has engaged in for a century past; newspaper correspondents and personal friends who accompanied the dead president on his ill-starred journey to Alaska, and who watched anxiously during the long, fateful hours at San Francisco that saw his passing.

All these were there—and more—to follow the black caisson with its flag draped burden through the endless lanes of sorrowing people.

The national capital swung into its sad task of bidding farewell to the president with heavy heart and sleepy eyes, for the night was a wakeful one in Washington.

Before the dawn of this historic day, the empty streets of the capital resounded to the tread of marching troops—the guards of honor whose duty it was to escort the grim-looking caisson on its long sad journey. From nearby camps and posts they marched into the city from all directions, concentrating finally in the narrow streets and broad avenues that surround the White House.

Promptly on the stroke of ten o'clock an expectant hush seemed to fall over the central part of the city. The great throngs that for hours had been clustering about the wide grounds grew suddenly still. There was only the restless stamping of the horses waiting patiently in front of the mansion and in the surrounding streets.

Then came the army band, with the low-noted dirge, then three squadrons of clattering cavalry, and following these the heavier, more ponderous artillery. The infantry followed and then the engineers and the marines and the bluejackets, finally a battalion of the National guard, and soon the avenue was reverberating to the cadences of marching troops and horses.

The chestnuts, with their sad burden, stamped into line behind all these marching men and horses and one of the most sorrowful processions in American history was under way.

Directly behind the caisson came Mrs. Harding in her conveyance, heavily veiled and behind the veil repeating what had been her prayer for five terrible days—that she will not break down.

The caisson with its precious burden was halted for a few minutes within the grounds while members of the official party were entering their cars. The president and Mrs. Coolidge followed the party of Mrs. Harding and then came the two former presidents of the republic who came to pay a solemn homage to the man who followed them into the White House. Former President and Mrs. William Howard Taft came first and in the next car was former President and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

The Harding cabinet, with the exception of two members now in Europe, came next, followed by representatives of every recognized government on earth, all of whom sent their diplomats to revere the memory of the lost president.

Justices of the supreme court came next, with the legislative branch of the government following. Scores of senators and several hundred representatives were in line, followed by governors from several states. The federal judiciary and the assistant cabinet secretaries ended the official party.

In the civic division, led by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, a hundred patriotic, civic, fraternal and professional organizations were in line, each represented by a delegation of ten mourners. These, in order, included Mexican war veterans, Loyal Legion, Grand Army of the Republic, United Confederate Veterans, Indian War Veterans' Societies, Veterans of the Spanish-American War, Military Order of Foreign Wars, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Military Order of the World War.

Disabled American Veterans of the World War, American Legion World War Veterans, American Red Cross, Sons of the Revolution, Daughters of the American Revolution, the Colonial Dames, Sons of the American Revolution, Order of Cincinnati and Sons of Colonial Wars.

Children of the American Revolution, Sons of Veterans, Daughters of Union Veterans, Knights Templars, Knights of Pythias, other Masonic organizations, Salvation Army, Young Men's Christian Association, Knights of Columbus.

American Library Association Overseas Service League, Red Cross Overseas Service League, National Disabled Soldier League, Woman's Overseas Service League, American Defense Society, Allied Patriotic Soldiers, Military Training Camp Association and the Army and Navy Union.

Grand Armies of America, National War Mothers, Georgetown University Cadets, Washington High School Cadets, Boys Scouts of America, Boy Scouts of Canada, Women's Relief Corps, and Department of the Potomac.

Americanization School Association, Junior Order United American Mechanics, Department of Potomac Spanish War Veterans, Woman's National Republican Club and Women's Department National Civic Federation.

A group of 100 prominent Washington business men concluded the funeral cortege.

Prior to the departure from the White House for the capitol a private service was held in the East room at which the only attendants were Mrs. Harding and the family, President Coolidge, members of the cabinet and personal friends of the president. They assembled quietly and after a brief wait Mrs. Harding came in, leaning heavily on the arm of George B. Christian, Jr., secretary to the president. She was deathly pale, and her whiteness was accentuated by the face. She leaned heavily on Secretary Christian's arm during the brief ceremony, which consisted almost solely of the Lord's Prayer, repeated after the minister by those present. Her lips moved spasmodically in repeating the prayer.

The great East room was heavy with the scent of flowers. Around its high walls stood wreaths and garlands of flowers, sent from the four corners of the earth to commemorate the grief of the world for the great heart that lay stilled under the flag.

While the brief private services were being conducted in the privacy of the East Room, members of the Senate and House, and the diplomatic corps, the latter resplendent in court uniforms assembled in the state dining room and the Blue room.

The wide avenue was scorching as the caisson slid gently out of the gates and took up the slow journey to the capitol. Waves of heat shimmered ahead of the marchers and gave a curious undulating aspect to the mournful procession.

Then came the caisson, and on its left, single file, five admirals from the navy in white uniforms, with mourning bands on their sleeves—Admirals Eberle, Rodman, Wilson, Stitt, Potter, and Major General Lejune of the marine corps. On the right were six major generals of the army: Butlard, Shanks, Muir, Brewster, Rickards of Pennsylvania, and O'Ryan of New York.

The honorary pall-bearers, Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts; Curtis of Kansas; Watson, of Indiana; Overman, of North Carolina; Fletcher, of Florida; Kendrick, of Wyoming; Speaker Gillett; Representatives Burton, of Ohio; Butler, of Pennsylvania; Cooper, of Wisconsin; Garrett, of Tennessee; Garner, of Texas, and Haugen, of Iowa, followed next in cars, three abreast —followed by the cabinet.

Then as far as the eye could see down the shimmering heat waves of the avenue came marching organizations.

A pall of silence, unbroken save for the click of horses' hoofs on the pavement, fell over the avenue from the White House gates to Fifteenth street as the cortege moved out. Somewhere in the crowd a woman sobbed out loud and it was heard above the tramp of the horses.

It required an hour and three minutes for the caisson to traverse the mile from the White House to the hill. Down Fifteenth street it turned and thence into the great avenue once more with only the sob of a woman or the cry of a baby coming from the crowd of thousands that packed the avenue twelve to twenty deep.

The procession swung into Pennsylvania avenue, with the music of five bands crashing out the inspiring strains of "Onward Christian Soldiers." The music wafted faintly back where the dead president was passing the silent throngs.

The caisson arrived at the capitol to find the escort of troops drawn up in a line extending across the broad plaza. It drew up at precisely the same point where twenty months ago Warren G. Harding officially took up the reins of his great office and delivered his inaugural address to the greatest crowd ever assembled in Washington.

As the horses slowly came to a halt the command "Present Arms" rang out on the hot, sultry air and with this final tribute from the soldiers, the remains of the president went slowly up the steps to the rotunda where they will rest until late this evening. Reverent hands laid the casket on the same catafalque that held the remains of Lincoln and McKinley. The circular room, with its high ceiling and portraying George Washington and thirteen angels smiling down, was crowded with friends and officials when the service men laid down their burden.

The cabinet, the members of the supreme court and other officials entered behind the casket. Then Mrs. Harding entered, leaning on the arm of Secretary Christian. She appeared even paler than at the White House. She walked haltingly to the head of the casket, stood there for a second as if in contemplation and then sank wearily down into a chair provided for her. The heat in the room was stifling but she did not raise her heavy veil.

Stillness fell over the room as Dr. A. Freeman Anderson, assistant pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, where the late president was a regular attendant, began the invocation.

When he had finished the male quartet from the same church sang "Lead Kindly Light." It was the president's favorite hymn.

CHATS WITH BROWNIE

Billie Brownie had had a number of interesting chats with many animals and birds of late, and they had told him a good deal about themselves.

"The Penguin Told Me."

"Of course," Billie Brownie had said to himself, "I can see that the animals are all nice to look at, and that they have most wonderful ways, but I wonder if they wouldn't tell me more if I went about to visit them."

So Billie Brownie had gone and he had seen many of the animals and birds, as I've said, and he was planning to tell the Brownies about these chats.

"You see," Billie Brownie said, when all the Brownies were gathered together, "I knew that so many of the birds and animals were of the same colors as the places where they made their homes and that they were thus so to be safe and not seen.

"I knew that they had costumes which were of a great deal of protection to them.

"But I wanted to hear more, so I talked to a good many. There had been some kind of an exhibition of animals and of their fine ways, and I thought perhaps the different creatures would tell me something of it.

"There were lectures about the animals, too. Perhaps they would tell me of these, also, I thought.

"And they told me a great deal. Yes, I have had some interesting chats of late.

"I talked to His Grace, the Swan. He told me that they had partially webbed feet, which were of a great deal of help to them in swimming.

The Pelican told me that their feet were webbed and their toes jointed together for this very reason.

"The Penguin told me that their wings made useful paddles, when they were going about traveling.

"I talked to a fine sea turtle who told me that he had front arms (or he said I could call them something else if I thought of a better name for them) which were very useful to him in swimming.

"These had bones which were flat and which were covered by skin and which served as the finest kind of paddles and were wonderfully fine when he wanted to swim as he had told me.

"Solid and flat bones made nice paddles he explained!

"I had a chat with the sea-otter who told me that his hind feet helped him to jump when he was on land, for he said:

"'As you can guess by my name, I am not much on the land, but I am a very fine swimmer.

"'A very fine swimmer, indeed.'

"Old Mr. Beaver was one of the most interesting I met.

"He said: 'Billie Brownie, I am glad to tell you anything you want to know. It is summer time now and I am off on a holiday, visiting my friends and so forth

"'It is not working time. What is it you would like to have me tell you?'

"'Something of yourself,' I asked him. 'I have been hearing of how useful various animals and other creatures found their legs and arms and that they were made so they would be useful.

"'I have thought it was wonderful the way they all were of such assistance—like useful tools or like having private automobiles to help them about.'

"Mr. Beaver laughed.

"'Well, if those are the things you've been finding out I'm a good one to come to for I have two kinds of limbs.

"'My front ones are splendid for taking hold of things and for getting me about, while my back ones are splendid for swimming.

"One of the Most Interesting."

"'You see, my toes are longer and stronger in my back legs than in my front ones and they are covered with skin which makes them a wonderful help to me when I swim—but not much when I walk. It is because of them that I'm not so very graceful on my feet.

"'But no matter. One can't have everything.'

"Such were the chats I had on my last trip," Billie Brownie ended

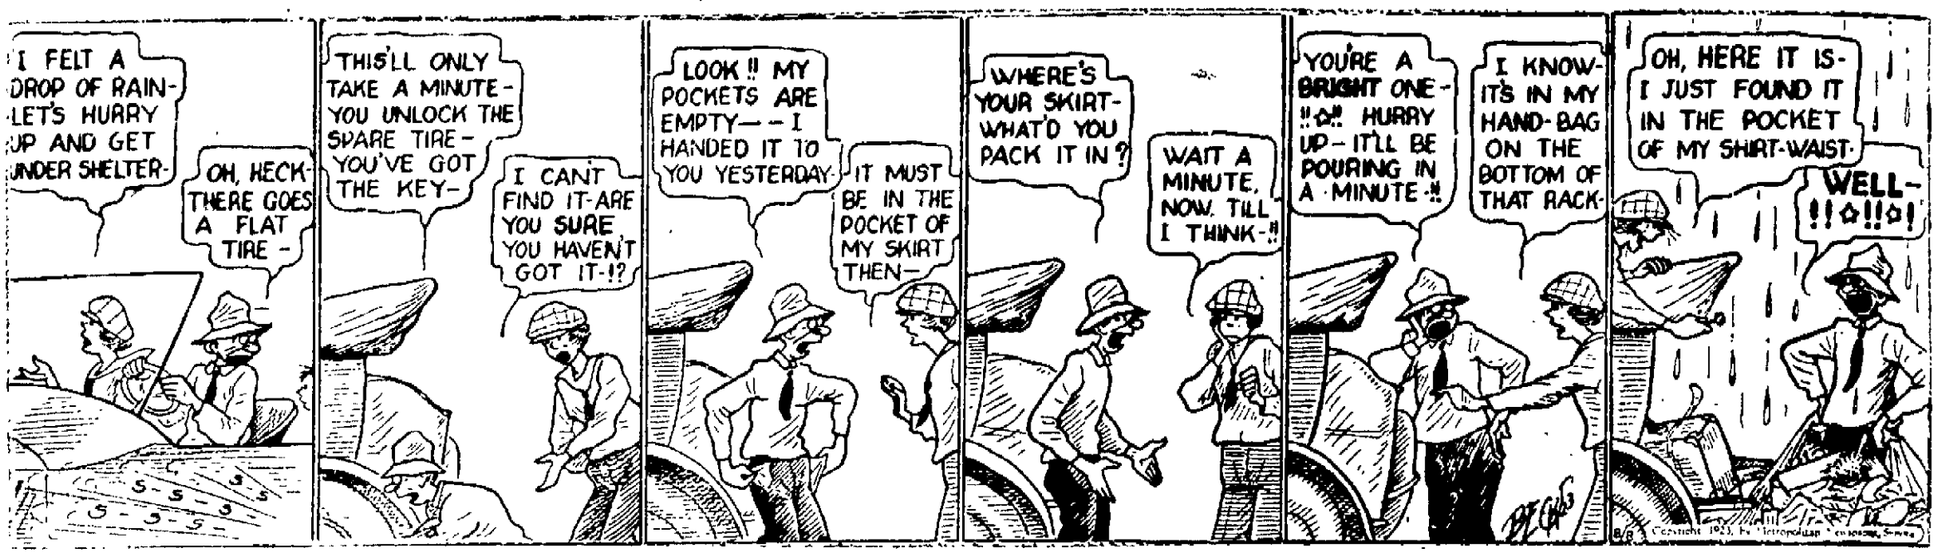
GAS BUGGIES—Transcontinental Tour—"Did It Ever Happen To You?"



The KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

I've whiled away dyspeptic hours
with crabs in marble halls,
And in the lowly cottage I've experienced codfish balls
But I've never found a viand that could so allay all grief
And soothe the cockles of the heart like rare, roast beef.
—Eugene Field.

A FEW SANDWICHES

Take six hard-cooked egg yolks and rub them to a paste, adding gradually two tablespoonfuls of olive oil, thick cream or softened butter. Add a dash of cayenne, one-half teaspoonful of salt, mix and spread on thin buttered slices of white bread.

Fish Sandwiches.—Rub to a paste a quarter of a pound of cold boiled fish, add one-half teaspoonful of worcestershire sauce, a tablespoonful of olive oil, salt and pepper to taste. Spread on buttered bread, arrange a lettuce leaf and cover with another slice of buttered bread.

Chicken Sandwiches. — Chop the white meat of one chicken very fine, then pound to a paste. Add salt and cayenne to taste. Cover one tablespoonful of gelatin with a tablespoonful of cold water, let stand half an hour, then add to it six tablespoonfuls of thick cream. Stir over heat until the gelatin is well dissolved. Now beat this into the chicken and let it stand until cold. Cut into squares and let it stand to harden. Serve cut in thin slices on buttered bread, covering with another slice of buttered bread.

Deviled Sandwiches.—Chop one-quarter of a pound of cold boiled tongue very fine; add to it two tablespoonfuls of olive oil, a dash of red pepper, a teaspoonful of worcestershire sauce, a little salt and paprika. Mix with the above ingredients the yolks of three hard-cooked eggs which have been put through a sieve. Serve as filling, with watercress as a garnish.

Anchovy Sandwiches.—Beat a half cupful of butter to a cream, adding gradually two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, salt and cayenne to taste and two tablespoonfuls of anchovy paste. Spread this on thin slices of bread—put two together, trim and cut into triangles.

Studebaker Light-Six Touring Car

We Want to Talk to Every Prospect Who Plans to Pay More Than $500 for a Car

We want to tell you something about the Studebaker Light-Six Touring Car. Want you to examine it—and to drive it.

Stop in and let us prove what a vast difference there is between the Light-Six and other cars at about the same price—or between the Light-Six and cars of other makes costing several hundred dollars more.

To be able to buy a Six, practically free from vibration, for less than $1,000 is an opportunity not duplicated anywhere in the world. Elimination of vibration adds immeasurably to the life of the motor. It is one of the reasons for the universal high resale value of the Light-Six.

The Touring Car body is all-steel—even to its framework. Seat cushions—of genuine leather—are ten inches deep and are placed at the most restful angle.

The one-piece windshield is handsome and practical because it gives unobstructed view of the road ahead and is rain-proof. The quick-action cowl ventilator and the parking lights are but indications of the quality and completeness of the appointments.

No other make of car ever built, by anyone, at any price, represents so great a dollar-for-dollar value as the Light-Six Touring Car. The savings resulting from large volume, complete manufacture and the fact that Studebaker's overhead is shared by three distinct models make possible its low price and high value.

The Light-Six upholds Studebaker's 71-year reputation for honest value.

PERCY PARKER GAVE A BOND

Arrested for Failure to Pay Wife $8 a Week for Support of Two Children He Pays $84 Due and Furnishes Bond—Other Cases in Police Court.

Percy Parker of No. 5 Ten Broeck avenue was arrested by Officer Soper Tuesday afternoon on complaint of Mrs. Parker, who resides at No. 55 Stuyvesant street, and who claimed her husband had not paid her $8 a week for the support of their two children, as directed by the court some time ago. There was a balance due of $84.

This morning Parker paid the $84 and Judge Schirick compelled him to furnish a bond of $300, which will be forfeited if he neglects to continue the weekly payments of $8 to his wife.

Earl Williams, a negro, was arrested Tuesday afternoon on complaint of Irving Moore, a negro, who is employed on Staples's brickyard. Moore claimed that Williams had stolen a ladies' watch which had been given him by his mother.

The police located the watch in the store of Abram Riber on the Strand, who had bought it of a negro, paying $4 for the watch.

Moore could not identify Williams as the man who stole the watch, and Mr. Riber, who was also in court, stated that Williams was not the man who sold him the watch.

Judge Schirick, after hearing the testimony, discharged Williams for lack of evidence.

James Brown, a one-armed negro, arrested the other day on a charge of loitering, was given fifteen minutes to leave the city.

Sam Weisberg, arrested for cutting the traffic standard at Railroad avenue and Broadway, was found guilty, but sentence was suspended as he had cut the standard to the left in order to get into Railroad avenue with his car and traffic to the right blocked him off from passing the traffic standard on the correct side.

MRS. HARDING BEARING UP WELL

Holds Vigil With Dead In East Room This Morning—Slept Seven Hours After Reaching White House.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Warren G. Harding, widow of the twenty-ninth president, held a last vigil with her dead this morning before turning his mortal remains over to his countrymen for the impressive public funeral.

Arising at 7:45 o'clock, Mrs. Harding stole quietly to the East Room, where the body of her distinguished husband lay in state. Sitting by his bier, with tear-dimmed eyes, she bowed beneath the burden of her grief. With a last long look at the bier, she turned away to let White House attaches prepare for the removal of the body to the capitol for the public services.

Despite the terrific strain under which she is laboring, Mrs Harding walked with a firm step this morning. It was reported that she has rested well during the night, getting almost seven full hours of sleep.

Mrs. Harding remained in the White House from the moment she reached "home" following the long three thousand mile journey along the "Avenue of Sorrow" until she entered the funeral procession which carried the late president's body to the capitol. During the morning she was joined by members of her family.

In the small coterie of her relatives, who accompanied Mrs. Harding from the moment she reached Washington and who were to go with her on the journey late today to Marion, Ohio, were Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Kling, Mrs. Harding's brother and his wife; Mr. and Mrs. Heber Votaw, brother-in-law and sister of the late president; Mr. and Mrs. Remsberg, of California, brother-in-law and sister of Mr. Harding and Mrs. T. Harding, Jr., wife of the president's brother.

On reaching the White House last night ahead of the funeral cortege from Union Station, it was learned Mrs. Harding was prevailed upon to rest on a couch. After the procession reached the White House, however, she insisted upon entering the East Room where the body of her husband had been placed in solemn state.

While all members of the White House party and attaches silently slipped out of the room, she was left alone with her dead. She sat beside the stately bier for thirty minutes. After her lonely vigil, Mrs. Harding retired.

GOETHALS MAY YET HEAD NEW DEPARTMENT.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Aug. 8.—There has been a persistent report at the state capital during the last few days that Governor Smith, in the hope of being able to finally persuade General George W. Goethals to become state superintendent of public works, will make no appointment to this position before fall.

At the same time it is known that friends of Col. Frederick Stuart Greene, state commissioner of highways, are bringing all sorts of pressure to bear upon the governor to have him appoint Mr. Greene to the job.

Only, it is said, in the event that General Goethals finally declines to become head of the new department, will Col. Greene land the position.

Secures Position.

Miss Minnie Eiten, an honor graduate of Spencer's Business School, has secured a situation as stenographer and office assistant at Greenkill Park.

OPEN MALDEN BRIDGE LABOR DAY

Present indications point to the opening of the new bridge over the West Shore railroad tracks at Malden on Labor Day. Pouring of concrete on the bridge roadway was commenced the past week. Upon the concrete, brick will be laid. This is about all remains to be done on the bridge. Its opening will be hailed with great relief by those who are using the detour.

CHANCE FOR BOYS TO CAMP OUT

If They'll Saw Wood It Won't Cost Much at Y. M. C. A. Resort Near Glenford—"Sugaring Off" Later On.

Arrangements are being made whereby boys and young men who are anxious to have a little camping experience with an opportunity of earning part of their board can do so through the Young Men's Christian Association of Kingston. The delightful camping spot on Glenford hillside affords a splendid opportunity for a young man or boy to enjoy a week's outing. Trips will be made from time to time for fishing, boating and swimming. Many outdoor games are in readiness for the contestant.

The Y. M. C. A. has five excellent fireplaces in its building in Kingston, but the price of wood this past year did not warrant using the fire places regularly. The plan is now to get in readiness ten cords of wood prepared for the fire places. The old buck saw will be tuned to order and much fun as well as some hard work will prove beneficial to the campers. Many of the old chestnut trees which are now dead will be cut and brought to the roadside where some of the trucks which have already been donated will carry the wood to the Association building.

There is a maple orchard of two hundred and fifty trees on the place and later in the summer it is the plan to gather wood, erect a sap house, in order that the members of the Association may enjoy the privilege of making maple syrup this coming spring.

All boys and young men who would like to spend this next week or ten days beginning Monday, August 13th, may make application at the Y. M. C. A. With two or three hours' work each day it will not cost anyone over $4.50 a week.

Some families have already found the Glenford Hillside a fine place to camp and there are already tents erected with flooring which can be used by members of the Association and their friends. Those desiring to make use of these privileges will make their request at the Association building as early as possible.

PORT EWEN.

The Gleaners of the Reformed Sunday School will meet at the home of Mrs. Elvin Hutchings on Broadway Friday evening. Mrs. Mary Niece and Mrs. Hutchings are the hostesses of the evening.

Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of Port Ewen, Clarence Hotaling, Scoutmaster, James Wesley assistant scoutmaster, left Wednesday for Esopus Island, where they will camp for a week or more. The troop numbers 32 and the boys are very much interested and enthusiastic, and are living up to their pledge.

NEWSPAPERMEN NOTE SMILE ON HARDING'S FACE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 8.—A slight smile, softening the tired droop of his lips, lightens the face of President Harding in death.

The smile was noted today by a delegation of White House correspondents who were privileged to view the president for a last time while he lay in state in the East room of the White House. It was Mrs. Harding's wish that the newspapermen be permitted to view the body. Many of the veteran writers, steeped with experience in the world of tragedy, showed signs of grief while viewing the body.

They expressed surprise, too, at the naturalness of the late president's features. His face showed no signs of the illness which swept him to an early grave.

FOUR KILLED IN GRADE CROSSING ACCIDENT.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Buffalo, Aug. 8.—Crashing into an auto truck carrying four people across the Wheatfield crossing, one mile east of La Salle last evening, a New York Central passenger train from Niagara Falls took a toll of four lives. All four victims were members of one family and all lived in La Salle. The dead are:

Mrs. John Brooks, 32 years old.

Christopher Protz, 52 years old, an uncle of Mrs. Brooks.

John Brooks, her son, 1 year old.

Christopher Brooks, Jr., 4 years old.

Quick Insurance Adjustment.

WHAT IS FAME

Within the past fortnight Jess Willard, former champion pugilist of the world, had occasion to stop over at Albany on his way to Oklahoma after his battles in New York city. His homeward journey saw him in better financial condition than before he came east and obtained his share of gate receipts which amounted to $200,000. Willard was not accompanied by press agents and was driving his own car unattended. He had not been in the capital city an hour before it was noised about that he was in town, and until he departed there was a stream of visitors to the hotel at which he was stopping just to get a look at the fighter who subdued Jack Johnson and who succumbed to Jack Dempsey.

Aside from the fact that Willard for a while possessed the distinction of being the best fighter in the world, he never, so far as is known, contributed in any way to the big scheme of things that will ever do anybody any good, except leaving a list of battles fought and won for the official fighting records compiled from year to year. Nevertheless, he was the most outstanding figure in Albany for more than a week, and it can be said without exaggeration that not an hour passed when smaller or larger groups were not to be seen entering the hotel just to get a glimpse at a man whose only claim to fame is that he successfully pounded somebody and somebody successfully pounded him.

In contrast with the furore made over Willard, men who have really given something helpful to the whole world have stopped over in Albany—and Albany is no different perhaps than any other city—and have gone on with no more attention paid to them than a line or two that "Dr. Jones, who has a cure for cancer," or "Dr. Brown, who has a cure for tuberculosis, was the guest of 'Dr. Smith' and left last night" for some other place where a lecture was scheduled. Not so with Willard, however, for he was the center of attraction for a week and not a few of the actually prominent people, socially and politically, called to pay him their respects.

Be it said to the credit of the former heavyweight, he did not seek the flattery forced upon him and he maintained a poise decidedly more refined than that evidenced by others of his "profession" under similar circumstances. The erstwhile greatest slugger did not manifest a single trait different from that of the ordinary law-abiding American citizen, but when one pauses to inventory what Willard has done to actuate people to put themselves out just to get a single look at him it prompts a prosaic person to repeat, what is fame.

BOBBED HAIR AT THE BAR.

Bobbed hair has won its fight—if it ever deigned to fight—and has now been vindicated before the bar of justice. Two years ago the merchants, bankers and other employers of female help in Chicago outlawed bobbed hair. But, as might have been expected, more Chicago hair was bobbed than ever. The ruling being ignored by employes, employers had to do likewise and quietly permit it to become dead letter. And now Judge Graham of San Francisco actually comes forward in defense of the bobbed head, declaring that, contrary to the hasty popular impression, bobbed hair and the homely virtues are in perfect harmony. He bases his conclusion on the fact that in 1,500 divorce cases coming before his court not one woman with shorn locks has appeared either as plaintiff or defendant.

Judge Graham, as reported, reasons that relief from the tedious task of "doing up" long hair and of washing and drying it tends to give a wife a "courageous and optimistic disposition." However that may be, it is easy to believe that such escape from a tiresome and never-ending task tends to reduce "nervousness" and associated irritability. Judge Graham also perceives beneficent results of "bobbing" in the fact that "husbands do not like wives with bedraggled hair." Though the judge's reasoning, as reported, may leave something to be desired, his conclusion that bobbed hair is not in itself a menace is perfectly sound. Though Delilah's shears brought disaster upon Samson, there has never been any reason to believe that a woman's homely virtues were dependent on the length of her locks. In any case the opinions of mere man on the subject will never check this or any other fashion the ruling sex elects to follow.

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Department of this paper, enclosing self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. I have noticed flocks of birds perching in apple trees eating from apples, black in color and very noisy. What are they?
2. What do crickets eat? Is it true they eat woolen goods?
3. Can trout be kept in a spring that is used for drinking water? What would they eat in winter, when they couldn't get insects?

Answers In Tomorrow's Nature Notes.

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. Someone told me nightshade berries are not poisonous if cooked. Is this so?

The berries of solanum nigrum are usually counted poisonous, particularly when unripe, and should not be experimented with. We know of a person who claims to have eaten and survived pie made of deadly nightshade in pie! The fully ripe and cooked berry may not be harmful, but because one person ate without damage is no proof everyone could do so.

2. Does a hen in the wild state cackle after laying an egg? If so, why doesn't this advertise the whereabouts of the egg to snakes, or any egg-stealers?

A "wild" hen would be the female of the jungle fowl of Asia, with whose habits we are not familiar. This fowl still exists, and very possibly cackles in the same general way as a domestic hen. The cackling might serve just the opposite to an advertisement of the nest, since the hen commonly runs off from the nest, and attracts attention to herself and not to her egg, by her noise.

3. Is lynx fur black?

Not in the wild state. The American lynx, usually called Canada lynx, is light reddish tan at the surface of its coat, in winter shading to a gray close to the skin. The summer coat is of reddish brown hairs, unlike the silky close winter coat. Furriers says the lighter the coat color, the finer the quality as a usual thing. The fur is commonly sold dyed jetty.

Duty of Hog Grower to Watch His Herds

Many Diseases and Parasites Cause Big Losses.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A hog which remains in good health from the day he is farrowed until he is loaded on a market-bound train is usually a satisfaction to the farmer, the packer, and the consumer. But there are many diseases and parasites which beset him during the few months allotted for his economic performance. If this performance is to be a creditable one, says the United States Department of Agriculture, the hog grower must keep close watch over his herd and learn to know something of the symptoms which indicate the possible approach of dangerous disease.

Hog cholera is the great enemy of the swine industry, although it has been diminishing in importance as a result of widespread use of anti-hog-cholera serum. It has been reduced by about 60 per cent from the losses during the most disastrous years, but with greater care and better understanding of the plague it could be reduced to a much greater extent.

With the gradually increasing control of this disease, it is important that swine growers give attention to the many other ailments which cause losses, some of which are frequently confused with cholera. Among the diseases with symptoms confused with those of cholera are anthrax, epilepsy, gastroenteritis, necrobacillosis, pleurisy, pneumonia, poisoning, swine plague, tuberculosis, and worms.

When there is any deviation from the normal in gait, appetite, or digestion, it is time for the owner to take measures to prevent possible losses. Minor ailments often can be successfully treated by the owner, but in case of doubt it is the part of wisdom to call for a veterinarian.

Georgia Girl Wins Over Boys in Raising Swine

Taking the championship of the southeastern states away from more than one hundred boy contestants, twelve-year-old Lois Duncan of Royston, Ga., won the grand prize in the Boys' Pig club events of the recent Southeastern fair in Atlanta, Ga.

Lois Duncan and Her Pet Pig.

She is seen with "Duncan Liberator," the Poland-China boar which won the championship. She also won second prize with another entry.

Her "pet pigs," as she calls them, were raised under her sole direction and care and are as tame as kittens. She expects to take them to other intersectional fairs in the country and capture more prizes.

Most Careful Attention for Eggs During Summer

Eggs are easily secured in March, April and May. It is during the three months which follow that the flock requires most careful attention. Twelve years results at the Storr's egg-laying contest showed that a normal well-fed hen should lay within seven of as many eggs in June, July and August as she laid in March, April and May. The average cost of feed for a hen is approximately 10 cents per month. This feed bill naturally runs less in summer months than in winter months. When seven out of ten eggs produced by the average hen are produced from March first to September first, can you afford to overlook feeding for summer egg production?

Corn Is Not Favored as Milk-Producing Ration

Corn is more of a fattening ration than a milk-production ration, but a certain amount of corn in a ration is valuable. A considerable amount of bundle corn can be fed to very good advantage with clover or alfalfa hay. Better results would be secured as a rule for the corn to be husked out and ground.

Two Ways to Misfortune.

There are people so eager to reach the top that they pay little need to the kind of ladders they are climbing. It is possible to climb to misfortune as well as to fall into it.

FALL PLANTING OF TREES TO BE HEAVY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Aug. 7.—Order for trees for the fall planting season received by the Conservation Commission up to August 1st indicates that interest in the movement for the reforesting of idle land is still increasing.

The sales of trees from the commission's nurseries for the spring planting season amounts to 7,104,000 trees. This number was nearly double the total of the proceding year which broke all previous records.

The fall planting season runs from early in September to late in October and in former years very few orders have been received before the latter part of August.

To keep pace with the rapidly growing interest in the reforesting movement Conservation Commissioner Macdonald early last year established a new forest nursery at Lowville.

The fact that there are in New York state farms today hundreds of thousands of acres of land that for income purposes is worth nothing at all minus whatever is paid on it for taxes and that practically all of the land can be made to earn more than five dollars an acre a year continuously by reforesting it is turning the attention of owners of idle farm land to tree planting and this year's great increase in tree orders is largely for this class of land.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10 year size requires 3½ yards of 32 inch material. Serge, crepe knit and jersey weaves, also taffeta are attractive materials for this style.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Catalogue Notice.

Sent 15c in coin or stamps for our up-to-date spring and summer catalogue, containing 550 designs of Ladies and Misses' and Children's Patterns, a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking, also some points for the needle (illustrating 30 of the various, simple stitches), all valuable hints to the home dressmaker.

Cooked or Uncooked.

The botuli microbe, source of mysterious death, can only be eliminated from the food we eat by long and intense cooking. So says one school of thought. But the vitamine, source of mysterious life, according to another school, cannot exist in cooked victuals and food without vitamines is so much waste matter. What is the poor consumer to do? If he wants to be nourished he's got to be poisoned and if he would escape poisoning he's got to go without nourishment. Another case of "where ignorance is bliss."—Los Angeles Times.

BANDIT FLEES PIE BARRAGE

It Was Not for Nothing That Mrs. Warner Had Watched the Movie Comedies.

NO TIME FOR SHOOTING

Chicago.—It was Sunday afternoon and there was a lull in the stream of customers that came to Mrs. Mary Warner's bakery. Mrs. Warner herself, glad of the respite—"At fifty I am not so young as I was," she would say—sat down and comfortably surveyed a row of newly baked strawberry pies that lay cooling on the counter ere they decorated her shelves.

A shadow fell across the pies and dispelled her musings. She looked up. In the doorway stood a tall and ugly man, his hands deep in his coat pockets.

"Yes?" queried Mrs. Warner politely as the man came slowly toward her. "What can I do for you?"

Both Hands Full.

For answer the man pulled out his hands, a revolver in each. Mrs. Warner saw them and began to think, think more quickly than she had ever done in her life. An idea came. With her sweetest smile she moved quietly toward the pies, apparently unconscious of the revolvers.

"You'd like some pie, I suppose?" she smiled on the bandit.

"I want what's in the till and I want it—" he began, then—splash!—and a perfectly new strawberry pie spread itself lovingly over his face.

Not for nothing had Mrs. Warner

As the First Pie Hit Him, He Dropped One Revolver.

watched Charlie Chaplin and his unerring skill with the custard pie. With a perfect action she flung pie after pie at the bandit till it was hard to tell which was which.

No Time for Shooting.

As the first pie hit him he dropped one revolver and tried to clear his eyes. As the second got there, down went the other revolver and he went after the work of excavation with both hands.

The third pie routed him and he fled for the door. Still pies followed him. In the joy of the moment Mrs. Warner did not care whether he was still there or not and until the pies gave out she decorated the door and the windows in artistic fashion.

When her ammunition failed her Mrs. Warner realized she had routed the enemy. Then, and not till then, did she call the Maxwell street police and tell them of the battle. When they arrived they gazed regretfully at the pastry debris.

"That's nothing," said Mrs. Warner proudly. "You should have seen that bandit. It was worth all the pies in the shop."

Nude Carpenter Nabbed After Bathtub Parade

San Mateo, Cal.—"Come up quick. September Morn is shingling a house!"

This message from an excited householder brought Chief of Police Tom Burke on the run. He arrived to find R. H. Merritt, carpenter, wearing only a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles and a hammer, at work on a job for Oscar Cavanaugh, contractor.

"What's the idea of the bathtub parade?" demanded the chief.

"It's good for my health, and it's cool," replied Merritt, gamboling around the ridge pole. "I always work raw."

"Well," said the chief, "you'll have to come down and be arrested."

"Oh, all right," said Merritt, "but I think it is an insult."

He was regarbed and taken before Police Judge George Kortell. The court groaned.

"I don't know what to do with this man," he said. "He's perfectly sane, but he won't stay dressed."

"Why should I?" demanded Merritt. "I was born naked, wasn't I?"

The court is holding him for investigation. He was arrested three months ago in Burlingame for the same offense and fined $15. He molests nobody and is said to be a good carpenter. But he possesses a clothes complex and refuses to stay dressed. The police of two towns say he is the toughest "nut" they have ever had to crack.

Beat Bear in Two-Mile Race for Life.

Superior, Wis.—Expecting to trap a tiny bear cub, Richard Susans, trapper, started out from his home. When he returned he was racing for his life. The mother bear had interfered. Susans got the cub, however, but ducked into his cabin just in time to escape about 200 pounds of fighting-mad bear.

Confessed Proxy Serves Bootlegger's Two Months

Robert Chapman, of Chicago, has confessed that he served a 60-day term in jail for Camel Nicrito, who was convicted of being a bootlegger. Chapman is being held on a conspiracy charge. He told officials he agreed to serve as proxy for Nicrito, who is now on his way to Italy, for $100 and an additional $5 for every day he served.

THIEF KILLS COP AND BURIES BODY IN CAVE

Hundreds of Searchers, Working Day and Night, Finally Unearth Bullet-Pierced Body.

Cleveland.—Kidnaped by a man whom he had arrested for stealing an automobile, Patrolman Dennis Griffin was murdered by his prisoner. A few hours later the officer's clothing was found in a pile of ashes. A day later searchers found the officer's body buried under two feet of ground in a cave 35 miles from the city.

After Officer Griffin arrested his man, John L. Whitefield, he placed the man in the stolen car and began the drive to the police station. He never arrived. Other officers, aided by scores of men, began a search.

One man finally told police that he saw the officer and Whitefield riding together in a car, that he heard a shot and that the policeman slumped forward in his seat. Boy scouts and school children then joined the search.

Searchers found the ashes of the officer's uniform, all burned but one button bearing his number. A day later men digging in a small cave on a hillside found the policeman's body. He had been shot twice through the head and once through the stomach. No trace has been found of Whitefield.

Chinaman Chooses Jail Rather Than Pay Fine

San Francisco.—Ng Yow is in jail here because he wanted to be Found guilty of having Chinese lottery tickets in his possession, he was given the alternative of a $10 fine or five days in jail, and he chose the jail sentence. Judge McAtee remarked it was the first instance in his experience of a lottery company refusing to pay the fine of an agent who had run afoul of the law. Such was not the case, however.

The company always settled the fines, but Ng Yow argued, why should he work hard for $1.50 a day when the company paid $3 for every day passed in jail, where there is no work to be done?

Woman Graduate Gives Her Blood to Help Alma Mater

New York.—Miss Grace Newman of Brooklyn, Adelphi college graduate, gave her life's blood as part of her pledged contribution toward the school's $300,000 building and endowment fund.

The blood—a pint and a half—was sold for $50 by Miss Newman to the post graduate hospital in a transfusion operation.

When the campaign for funds began Miss Newman pledged herself to raise $312.

"I could think of no easier way to earn $50," she smiled. "We Adelphi girls all mean to do all we can. Honestly, the talking about it is much harder than the operation itself."

Nashville Burglars Take Nothing But Heirlooms

Nashville, Tenn.—The arrest and confession of a modern Oliver Twist here may solve the mystery of who burglarized the home of Mrs. Leslie Warner of $5,000 worth of antiques last April, and followed by entering 18 Nashville homes on as many successive nights, stealing only heirlooms.

Roy Bell, a sixteen-year-old boy, and M. O. Harbin, forty, are in the city jail, charged with implication in the burglary of the Warner residence, and officers have a confession of the youth that he stole the antiques when forced to by a band of men.

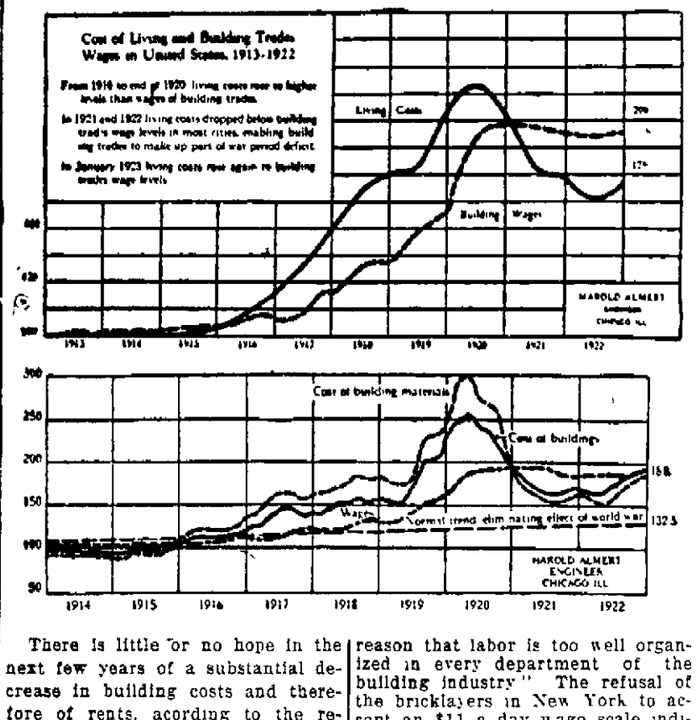
BUILDING COSTS AND RENTS ARE TO REMAIN HIGH FOR SEVERAL YEARS

Wages of Building Labor Key Factor, Although Coal and Freight Costs Play Part—Still a Shortage of Buildings Throughout Country.



There is little or no hope in the next few years of a substantial decrease in building costs and therefore of rents, acording to the results of a study by William J. Moore, president of the American Bond & Mortgage Company, and the postponement of important work all over the country.

The key factor in the situation is the wages of building labor, declares Mr. Moore Until there is a reduction in labor costs, building costs cannot decrease. Other conditions necessary to lower construction costs are lower coal prices, freight rate reductions, decreases in general living costs and reduction in income taxes.

How the present crisis developed is clearly seen from the charts prepared by the American Bond & Mortgage Company's engineers The first chart shows the relation between the general cost of living and the wages of workers in the building trades. Figures for 1913 are used as a basis of comparison, 100 From 1916 until the end of 1921, living costs kept climbing far ahead of building trades wages The peak in both cases was reached about the middle of 1920, when the crash in general business hit this country Living costs fell much more rapidly, of course, than wages, which were maintained through existing wage agreements between unions and employers In 1921 and 1922, living costs dropped 15 per cent below wage levels in the construction field in most sections of the country, so that the workers in the industry were able, to some extent, to make up for deficits incurred during the high cost of living period Beginning last summer, living costs again rose, reaching, in January, 1923, 16 per cent above the level at the beginning of last year Now living costs are back again at wage levels.

The conclusion from this chart, according to Mr Moore, is that "reduction in building wages will not be of easy accomplishment, for the reason that labor is too well organized in every department of the building industry" The refusal of the bricklayers in New York to accept an $11 a day wage scale indicates how far the situation is from improvement.

The other chart shows how building costs have gone up since 1914 and from the lines the probable conditions in the next few years may be indicated. Eliminating the effects of the World War, the normal trend of costs has been slowly but steadily rising at an increase of 2 5 per cent annually. This normal trend line has been projected from 1898. Existing building costs cannot go below this normal trend line permanently The normal level at the present time is 132 5.

Building during 1923 will equal the record of 1922, if conditions are not hampered by transportation shortage or strikes, as the continuing housing dearth and loans at attractive interest rates are stimulating building The continued demand for construction will probably keep material prices up to a level even higher than that of 1922

Building costs will not go down to the normal trend until about 1927 or 1928 predicts Mr Moore from these statistics At that time they will probably be about 50 per cent abpve the pre war level This is indicated at the probable point at which the actual building costs will meet the probable trend line If there should be overbuilding a lack of demand will result and material prices would drop temporarily below the normal trend As soon as building is resumed, however prices will go up again at least as high and perhaps higher than the normal trend line If and when the housing shortage is nearly made up building costs should drop to the normal line because of decreased demand for buildings Actual construction records however, prove that there is still a building deficit amounting to 1 5 to 3 years of work to be made up so that normal conditions cannot be expected before 1927 or 1928.

ON SILENT GUARD

Explanation of Mysterious Figure in Grecian Cave.

If Surmise Is Correct, Grim Custodian of Treasure Was Most Cunningly Devised.

Always the Thracian peasant is stirred to tell you stories of caves. I once employed a queer man-of-all-trades as a foreman of excavation. He was a Thracian Greek from Varna, on the Black sea, whence he had been driven by Bulgarians into Greece. He had mostly been a sailor on the Pontic coasts, but he had been to many lands and knew Asia Minor well.

"I could tell you a queer story," he said to me one evening in true sailor fashion, "that a farmer once told me in a village near Smyrna." He lit his pipe (only sailormen among Greeks take to pipes), and started his story after we had finished our digging and were taking our evening coffee by our tents. "This farmer went once far inland into the hills. He found the entrance to a deep cave and, with a certain hesitation, went in. He found himself in a well-cut tunnel that led straight into the rock. After a time he turned a corner and saw a red glimmer of flame.

"Greatly alarmed, he moved on very quietly and cautiously. Again he rounded a bend and saw, at the end of a straight stretch a blaze of fire coming out from a natural vent in the rock. He stopped motionless, for there in front of the flame, was seated the figure of a man perfectly still. He crept on cautiously. Suddenly, as he advanced, the figure rose, rigidly, to its feet, swung round and faced him. He could not see its face, for it was against the light. He took one more nervous step forward and, as he did so, the rigid figure lifted in both its hands a huge hammer, still facing him. He stepped back, and as he did so the figure lowered the hammer. He stepped back one more step, and the figure sat down again. Less nervous, he advanced again.

"As he did so the figure rose once more, silent and rigid. He made one more step, and it lifted its hammer menacingly once more. Again he withdrew, and the figure lowered its hammer and sat down. Now he was thoroughly alarmed and made his way quickly out of the tunnel."

"Did he find out who the man was?" I asked.

"No," replied my sailorman, "he did not, neither did he try. But my opinion is," he continued, "that there was a vast treasure buried in that cave, and the owner had made a mechanical figure which worked automatically by some mechanism that operated from the floor. As you went in you trod upon the levers and the figure rose to its feet. You went further, and it lifted its hammer. If that farmer had taken one step more he would have been a dead man. The fire was a natural vent of gas that was never quenched. There are many such away back in Asia Minor and Persia." He paused, as ancient mariners always pause after they have reached their finest effect: "You would have liked to excavate that cave," he said, simply.

I often wonder what element of truth was at the bottom of that story. All one can be certain of is that the Smyrniot farmer left the cavern in a very great fright. But who is not really afraid of caverns in his inmost heart? We call it "caution"; we are afraid lest the roof fall in and bury us, lest we disappear down some unexpected hole. Really, it is the inborn terror of the dark that frightens us, perhaps itself born of the danger that beset primitive man in caves—cave lions, cave bears, or some last remnant of an earlier, more savage strain of man, the prototype of the ogre of the fairy story.—Exchange.

SCARED BY BAD LUCK BIRD

Sea Gull of Evil Omen Has "Got the Goat" of Residents of Pelham Bay.

Pelham Bay is holding its breath and waiting for the next catastrophe. What the catastrophe will be no one dares to prophesy, but that there will be misfortune of some kind no one familiar with the bay would doubt. For the bird of ill omen has appeared again, says the New York Sun and Globe. The bird is an elderly and disgruntled sea gull which looks like a cross between Shakespeare's Polonius and Poe's raven.

It sits around on the rocks that dot the bay and looks exceedingly elderly and disgruntled and misanthropic and ominous. If transmigration of souls happens in the bird world, the creature is undoubtedly the raven or Polonius or both. "Nevermore" is that bird's middle name and its philosophy of life.

Bungalowists around Pelham bay all remember the extraordinary series of fatalities that occurred last summer in the wake of the bird of ill omen. It was nearly June of last year when the bird first put in an appearance looking no less acidulous than it does today.

Hardly had the bird's peevish face and gray-white feathers first been seen than three fishermen upset their boat. One was drowned and the other two were pulled out barely conscious.

Two weeks later, while the evil eye of the bird was still on the bay and its inhabitants, came the great storm which will be remembered as long as anybody lives who saw it or was caught in it.

Then came the whale scare which put a crimp in the long-distance swimming contests. And there came one thing and another. A host of unkillable rats overran Chimney Sweep Islands, pride of the bay. A swimmer was drowned within fifty yards of a boathouse. The captain, most picturesque of 300 pound men and one of the historic figures of the bay, left it flat and emigrated to the Bronx.

All because of the bird of ill omen says the Bay. Not a doubt in the world.

When winter came Pelham Bay hoped the bird would go South and forget to come back, but this dyspeptic-looking granduncle of all sea gulls has an enviable memory. Here he is again, and has been here since March. Bungalowists of Pelham feel sure that nothing else but that bird caused the extremely cold spring—perhaps even caused the sun to lose its three degrees of heat or whatever the amount.

The bird doesn't cut up any antics, you understand. He—the captain before he departed insisted it was she—just sits on a rock, looking more like an ill omen than anything you ever saw. Pelham Bay is waiting with some anxiety. As long as the bird of ill omen sticks around it believes with some reason that anything is more than likely to happen.

The Ordeal of Water.

France occasionally harks back to the Middle ages, as recently when a justice of an inferior court allowed the old ordeal of water to decide a case. It appears that the case was that of a dye company against which charges were brought by the prefect of the department with a society of fishermen joining action to prevent the company emptying coloring matter into public streams. They received 5,000 francs for damages done to fishing. Counsel for the defense, in summing up, declared the water near the mouth of the company's drain was not harmful to fish and asked to make a demonstration. "If the fish die it will be a sort of judgment of God renewed from the Middle ages, and we will have lost our case," he stated. A bucket of healthy fish was then presented to the judge, who placed them in a bowl of alleged contaminated water. In less than two hours all the fish had died.—Scientific American.

There Was a Reason.

In the examination of talesmen in the Criminal court by Charles S. Wiltsie, attorney for a defendant on trial, a dialogue occurred between Mr. Wiltsie and William J. Freaney, 1130 North New Jersey street, a plumber, who was a talesman, that created a ripple of merriment throughout the courtroom.

"Have you ever had any previous jury service?" Mr. Wiltsie asked.

"Yes, in this court about fifty years ago," was the reply.

"Do you have any recollection as to the kind of case that was?" the attorney asked.

"Yes, it was a petty criminal case," Mr. Freaney replied. "The jury hung all night to get an extra day."

"You deliberated all night because you had some sincere opinion in the case?" Mr. Wiltsie asked.

"No, I stayed because I couldn't get out," he replied.—Indianapolis News.

Dig Up Statue of Minerva.

A colossal seated statue of Minerva, carved from colored alabaster, has been discovered on the site of the Emporium, which was a landing place on the Tiber for marble shipments in the days of republican and imperial Rome. Surrounding Emporium were schools of marble cutters and sculptors, and there also were many Hellenistic art associations.

Workmen digging the foundation for a building came upon the statue, which is carved in the most exquisite Hellenistic style. Its color is said to make it unique.

ROTARIANS VISIT NEWBURGH'S CLUB

Conduct Weekly Meeting—Judge Clearwater Pays Tribute to Late President Harding.

President J. T. Johnson, of the Kingston Rotary Club, visited Newburgh on Tuesday with about 20 Kingston Rotarians and conducted the noonday meeting of the Newburgh Rotary Club. The Rotarians took along the Hanveys from their Ulster Park farm to entertain during the luncheon and Judge Clearwater to do the serious speechmaking after the luncheon. The judge related a conversation he had with President Harding a number of years ago in which the latter had spoken of service to others as the great duty of man. He paid an eloquent and feeling tribute to the dead president, to his sincerity as a Rotarian and to the grandeur of the simplicity of the inauguration of the new president.

VOTING MACHINES FOR SAUGERTIES

Town Board Decides To Install Machines With Privilege of Buying If Experiment Proves a Success.

Saugerties voters will cast their ballots by machine on election day, Tuesday, November 6. The town board determined this matter at its meeting Monday afternoon. It was voted unanimously to lease nine machines, one for each election district, and should necessity require it, an additional one for use in district No. 1, with privilege of purchasing these machines providing they prove satisfactory. The town board of Saugerties in taking this action desire to curtail expenses and are also making a test of the usefulness of the machines in meeting a demand owing to the increasing number of voters thereabouts. The machines will be procured from the Automatic Registering Co. of Jamestown, N. Y.

HANVEYS WERE A WHOLE SHOW

"Did Their Stuff" For Rotarians At Newburgh and Rotarians Will Go To Exposition To See Them Again.

Kingston Rotarians who took the Hanveys to Newburgh on Tuesday to furnish entertainment at the Rotary luncheon know that the management of the Kingston Exposition made no mistake in engaging the Hanveys to give the entertainment at the Exposition. There are only two of the Hanveys, Louis A. Hanvey and his wife, but they are a whole show and a lot better than most whole shows, as any Newburgh or Kingston Rotarian who heard and saw them on Tuesday will testify.

ALL STARS TRIM MILLBROOK

Even Up Series by Taking 6-4 Game —Stoudt in Fine Form—Has Six Run Lead.

The Kingston All Stars got sweet revenge on the Millbrook Club at Millbrook by taking a well played game by the score of 6 to 4. The All Stars had their batting orbs with them and chalked up no less than twelve clean hits, including a homer, a triple and a double.

Stoudt pitched great ball for the locals and held the Millbrook clan scoreless for seven innings, great playing on the part of his teammates keeping base runners scarce. Three double plays were registered by the Kingston infielders.

The Kingstonians got busy in the first inning. Lynch walked on four wide ones. Van Bramer laid down a neat bunt, advancing Lynch to second, and Leonard slammed out the first ball pitched for a homer over the left field gate, chasing in Lynch with him. That ended the scoring until the fifth, although the Kingstonians had runners aboard nearly every inning. In the fifth Lynch singled to left. Van Bramer crashed out a double to left, scoring Lynch. Van Bramer taking third on a passed ball. Leonard grounded out to first and Stoudt grounded to short, Van Bramer holding third. However, the Kingston first baseman scored when Nichols singled to center. The Colonials City lads lost no time again in the sixth when they scored two more runs on hits by Nichols, Vogt's three base drive and Nichols's single. Here Simmons faded out of the picture and Hammond took up the pitching burden. The All Stars were sporting a 6-0 lead then however, and the damage was done. Hammond pitched good ball and set the visitors back without further scoring.

As in the previous game, the pastime was marked by its brilliant fielding performances, the All Stars having no errors chalked against them while Millbrook made but one, this being a hard try on Cragan's liner to Ferry. Haman made a wonderful catch of Stoudt's foul fly to left in the sixth.

Cragan pitched the ninth inning for the Kingston outfit and set them down in order.

One of the largest crowds of the season witnessed the game. This Sunday Millbrook plays Pine Plains and later will play the Schatz of Poughkeepsie its annual series. Last year the Millbrook team defeated the Schatz in the series between the two clubs.

Big-Six
5-Passenger Coupe $2550
1924 Model

1924 Models Are the Finest Big-Sixes Studebaker Ever Built

The enthusiasm with which the new 1924 model Studebaker cars have been received locally is an indication of the reception they have enjoyed throughout the country.

No wonder. They are emphatically the most compelling values Studebaker ever offered and the public knows that Studebaker has been a consistent leader, year after year, in the amount of intrinsic value per dollar invested.

The Big-Six Sedan and the Coupe are the finest cars that have ever borne the name Studebaker. They provide all the performance, all the comfort, and all the dependability that any car will give—at a price that smaller producers cannot approach.

Everything for which one can wish in motoring convenience, comfort and utility has been provided—even to the extra disc wheel with tire, tube and tire cover (two on Sedan); handsome nickel-plated bumpers, front and rear; large, roomy trunk; automatic gasoline signal, and many other features. There is nothing more to buy.

The prices of the Sedan and Coupe are moderate because of Studebaker's large production, vast physical and financial resources, the manufacture of all vital parts in Studebaker plants, and the accumulation of experience and prestige gained through 71 years of building quality vehicles.

AUSTIN REPLACES FOHL AS BROWNS' MANAGER.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 8.—Jimmy Austin, veteran third-sacker, who recently has been coaching the St. Louis Browns, today took over formal management of the club, replacing Lee Fohl, dropped by Phil Ball, owner of the American League Club.

Fohl was to leave New York today for his home in Cleveland. He stated he would later go to St. Louis, but declined to explain why.

"There will be no change in the line-up of the Browns," Austin said today. "We'll go right along fighting every inch of the way."

Austin, a Welshman, is 41 years old. He has been playing baseball 20 years.

TWO MEMORIAL SERVICES FRIDAY

In accordance with the proclamations of President Coolidge, Governor Smith and Mayor Crane, a union memorial service of the downtown churches will be held in the Wurts Street Baptist Church on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock daylight saving time.

The service will be in charge of the Rev. R. P. Ingersoll and addresses will be delivered by the Rev. F. W. Moot of Ponckhockie Church and County Judge Joseph M. Fowler. Mrs. R. P. Ingersoll will preside at the organ and the choirs of the various downtown churches are invited to sit in a body near the organ and lead the congregational singing of President Harding's favorite hymns.

The general public is invited to attend this service regardless of race, creed or color and it is expected that many from Port Ewen and Connelly will also attend. A more complete announcement of the program will appear in tomorrow's paper.

According to the instructions of Bishop Manning, services at the Holy Cross Church in memory of the late president will be held Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Livingston Street Lutheran Church will hold a memorial service the details of which have not been worked out.

Postmaster William C. Dewitt announced today that the Kingston post-office department would close at noon Friday and remain closed until 6 o'clock that evening when the usual mail collections would be made and mail distributed at the sub stations and main office. Between the hours of 12 and 6 o'clock, however, there will be no delivery or collection of mail and none of the post-office employes will work. The usual morning delivery of mail will be made.

The wholesale grocers of Kingston, the Everett & Treadwell Co., the F. B. Matthews Co., and W. R. Harrison & Co., will close their places of business on Friday at noon.

The 9,000 stores of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, including those in Kingston, will close all day Friday.

The State of New York National Bank will be closed all day on Friday, August 10.

The First National Bank of Rondout will also be closed all of that day.

The B-G-R department store, the Van Wagenen Department store, Gregory and Company, Stock and Cordts, Wonderly and Elghmey's will close for the day at 12:30 o'clock.

Grocery and provision stores which were asked today about their plans, were unable to say as yet what they would do.

ST. PETER'S PICNIC TO BE HELD THIS EVENING

Relying on the promises made for fair weather for their picnic this evening the youngsters of St. Peter's parish having been saving up their pennies for the big event. They are on edge to demonstrate their prowess in "bringing home the bacon" in the shape of prizes which will be offered in connection with the various games. And after the boys and girls have shown their elders what they can do, who can say what will be the fate of the hundreds of ice cream cones, cracker-jack, etc., that will be endeavoring unsuccessfully to elude pursuit?

For the adults it is going to be an excellent opportunity for many a reunion over the supper table where a bountiful repast will be served.

On Thursday morning the parish historian can again record, it is confidently believed the 1923 summer festival of St. Peter's Church as having been, both from a social and financial standpoint, a complete success.

Mrs. Lang Reports Theft.

Mrs. John Lang of 114 Hunter street, reported to the police this morning that a diamond pin and a black bag containing $8 in money had been stolen some time after 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from her home.

Memorial Service at Rosendale.

A memorial service for the late lamented president will be held at the All Saints' Episcopal Church, Rosendale, Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Dance at Eddyville.

A dance will be held at Baldwin's Hall, Eddyville, this evening. A feature of the dance will be the violin playing of an artist from Plattsburg.

New York, Aug. 8.—The stock market opened steady today. Most issues made fractional gains. Trading was dull, as the exchange suspended from 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., during the funeral services for the late President Harding. U. S. Steel was unchanged at 88⅛. Bethlehem Steel at 48½; American Locomotive at 73⅞, and Baldwin Locomotive at 111½ were up ⅜. Studebaker gained ¾ to 104⅜. Mack truck ⅛ to 75. Standard Oil of California rose ⅜ to 49½; Marland Oil ¼ to 30¼, California Petroleum ⅛ to 19 and Pacific Oil ¼ to 33¾. Railroads stocks were firm.

Because of the hour and a half suspension of business during the funeral services at Washington of the late President Harding, speculative interest in the stock market was reduced to a minimum today. Trading was largely professional and a confident tone was evident throughout. The industrial list although steady in the main body was not without its weak feature. The leather group showed weakness, but oil stocks were steady and copper shares appeared under accumulation, advancing fractionally.

The market turned weak in the afternoon trading and many stocks showed losses ranging from 1 to over 2 points.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

George Keim died at Red Hook. He will be buried at that place this afternoon. He was in the butcher business for many years at Glasco.

This morning at 9 o'clock the funeral of Lawrence McGrath, who died at his residence No. 22 Clinton avenue on Sunday last was held, and at 9:30 a high Mass of requiem was celebrated for the repose of his soul at St. Joseph's Church by the Very Rev. Dean Joseph G. Cushman. The funeral services were very largely attended the deceased having had a very large circle of acquaintances. The casket bearers were Thomas O'Hara, Patrick Cahill, Martin Cashin and James Leary. The interment was in the family plot in St. Mary's Cemetery, where the Rev. Eugene A. Duggan pronounced the committal services.

The funeral of Elizabeth O'Brien, wife of Thomas Brooks, who died in this city on Saturday last, was held from the residence of her parents, David and Hannah Murphy O'Brien at 45 Sterling street, Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock and from St. Joseph's Church at 9:30, where a high Mass of requiem was celebrated for the repose of her soul by the Rev. Eugene A. Duggan. The large church edifice was thronged with relatives and friends of the deceased. The floral offerings were very profuse and beautiful. The casket bearers were Edward and James Howard, John Scully and William McManus. The interment was in St. Ann's Cemetery at Sawkill, N. Y., where the Rev. Alexander Cahill conducted the committal services.

John Frederick Tietjen, a well-known resident of this city for many years, died Tuesday afternoon about 3 o'clock at the Dr. C. O. Sahler Sanitarium after a long illness, aged 76 years. Deceased was a son of the late Henry and Helena Cordts Tietjen who resided for years on Flatbush avenue. Mr. Tietjen is survived by one sister, Mrs. Fred C. Lang of Leona, L. I., and one brother, Theodore Tietjen of 511 Albany avenue. When William D. Brinnier was mayor of this city he appointed Mr. Tietjen an alderman for the Third ward. Mr. Tietjen came to Kingston in 1861 from New York city where he was born in 1847. After spending some time in boating and in employment on brickyards Mr. Tietjen about 49 years ago with Frederick C. Lang his brother-in-law formed the firm of Tietjen & Lang and conducted a large shipyard at Hoboken, N. J., where Mr. Lang invented the longest sectional dry dock in the United States and being able to take on the largest steamships built up a large and profitable business. Several years ago Mr. Tietjen retired and the Tietjen & Lang shipyards were merged with the Todd Shipbuilding Corporation but the shipyard is known by its original name throughout the world where are seaports. The funeral will be held from the home of his brother, Theodore N. Tietjen, 511 Albany avenue, Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Interment in the family plot in Motrepose Cemetery.

CEREMONY PROVED ORDEAL TO MRS. HARDING.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Florence Kling Harding, the most pathetic figure in America today, returned to the White House from her journey down the "avenue of sorrow" this afternoon in a state approaching physical collapse.

Burdened under an overwhelming grief, Mrs. Harding had to be lifted from her motor car and practically carried into the White House on the arms of attendants.

The ordeal of turning her husband over to his nation for a state funeral apparently had sapped away the last vestige of her indomitable will to "carry on."

Shining Windows.

Window panes rubbed briskly with a cloth dipped in vinegar will be bright.

COOLIDGE DROPS ALL OTHER WORK

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 8.—President Calvin Coolidge today dropped every vestige of his high office to pay humble tribute to the nation's lost leader. The new president joined with the countless thousands, not as the chief executive of the land, but as any private citizen in honoring the memory of Warren G. Harding, the American and the man.

Joining in the solemn ceremonies early in the day President Coolidge subordinated all else to the sounding of the proper note in the nation's sorrow. All thoughts of the presidency and the duties of office were cast aside, he was merely one of a hundred million mourners.

Arising early, the president prepared himself for the ordeal of following the body of his beloved friend and chief through the last sad rites. Every ceremony in the magnificent state funeral offered by a sorrowing nation as the only possible tribute to its dead president, found Calvin Coolidge participating in the quiet, unassuming and yet heartfelt manner so characteristic of his every action.

Immediately before ten o'clock, President Coolidge left his hotel for the White House to escort the body of President Harding to the capitol. Down crepe-draped-Pennsylvania avenue he followed the funeral cortege, officially the chief mourner of the nation, unofficially one of its sincerest.

The president arose before 7 o'clock. All business was suspended for the day in the temporary executive offices out of respect for the solemn occasion. At 7:30 he breakfasted with Mrs. Coolidge and a few minute later met with Col. C. O. Sherrill, presidential aide, to receive a report on arrangements for the funeral.

The president then retired to his own room, giving instructions that no callers except those in the official party be admitted, until the hour of departure for the White House. Through the wait, the president showed signs of nervousness, frequently pacing back and forth in his room. The first member of the official party to reach his side was Secretary of War Weeks, who arrived at 9:05 o'clock.

Society Notes

Teabout-Courtwright.

Ralph D. Teabout of Schenectady and Miss Bertha M. Courtwright of 51 Moore street, this city, were united in marriage on July 9th by the Rev. Mr. Haines of Schenectady. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Teabout, brother and sister-in-law of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Teabout will reside at No. 152 Washington avenue, Schenectady.

Christiana-Britt.

Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the M. E. Church at Oriskany Falls, Miss Florence Britt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Britt was united in marriage to the Rev. Harry E. Christiana, son of Stephen D. Christiana of Krumville. The Rev. Mr. Aubrey performed the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Before the ceremony began two vocal selections, "Because" and "O Promise Me," were sung by Mrs. Glen Keys o. Deansboro. The bridal party marched to the altar to the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin, played by Mrs. Russel Davies. The ushers led the procession, followed by the six bridesmaids. Immediately after the maid of honor came the bride on her father's arm. The maid of honor was Miss Margaret I. Brown of Lewisburg, Pa., and the bridesmaids were Miss Drusilla Christiana of Brooklyn sister of the groom, Miss Marguerite Cook of Mohawk, Miss Florence Nesbit of Jordan, Miss Vera Gray of North Brookfield, Miss Helen Bigelow of New Hartford and Miss Julia O'Neil of Oriskany Falls. Oliver D. Christiana of Ilion was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Almon Reynolds, Howard Curtis, Howard Staehla of Oriskany Falls and Hermon Reynolds of Madison. The bride wore a gown of white crepe de chine beaded with white pearls. It was fashioned very simply with straight lines and was sleeveless with an imported lace bertha. Her veil was made cap fashion with orange blossoms across the front. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor wore a dress of peach colored georgette. She carried an arm bouquet of pale pink gladiolas and ferns tied with peach colored ribbon. The bridesmaids wore dresses of the pastel shades and silver bands across the foreheads. They carried old fashioned arm bouquets of ferns and hollyhocks. After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home. The couple left for a motor trip in the central part of the state and will be at home in September in New York city. Mr. Christiana is a graduate of Mt. Hermon preparatory school and Syracuse University in the class of 1921 and is now in the Union Theological Seminary, New York. He is a member of the Sigma Delta Epsilon fraternity. At present he is pastor of the Fort Hamilton Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn. Mrs. Christiana was graduated from Syracuse University in the class of 1921 and has taught for the past two years in the high school at Madison. Many out of town guests attended the ceremony, including the bridegroom's father of Krumville, Mrs. Drusilla Bevier of Samsonville, Mrs. Sadie Henderson of Amsterdam, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bedford and son, Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Christiana, Mrs. S. J. Craig and daughter, Hasbrouck Christiana, Mr. and Mrs. Wengert, all of Ilion, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Newton of Frankfort, Mr. and Mrs. Fred King of Fayetteville, Miss Mary Purdee of Canadarago, Miss Emily Beeman of Oneida, Mr. and Mrs. Barton of Holland Patent, Mr. and Mrs. Dixon of Kenwood and Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun of North Brookfield.

REP'N WOMEN BEGIN MEETING

Have Lost True Friend in President Harding, Says Mrs. Young—Women's Republican Club Planned for County.

There was a very representative and good sized meeting of Republican women of Ulster county held this morning at the court house in the court room, where the desk was draped with American flags. Over the desk was a flag and crepe draped picture of the late president, Warren G. Harding, while at one side of the platform stood a flag at half mast.

Miss Roberts presided at the morning meeting and in opening the meeting said that if there was anything which the women could do to support the ideals of President Harding's, whose death was being mourned the world over, it was to stand by law enforcement and in otherwise upholding his ideals. It had been felt that by carrying through the meeting greater honor would be done the late president than by postponing it.

The first speaker to be introduced by Miss Roberts was Mrs. Edward Young of Milton, who spoke first of the national sorrow over the death of President Harding, who was not only our president but seemed to be a personal friend of the world, and that at a time when the world so sadly needed a true friend. Surely the women of this country had lost a true friend in the death of President Harding. After her eulogy of the president, Mrs. Young clearly explained the idea of the formation of a Women's Republican Club of Ulster county as being for the purpose of educating and informing the women voters of the county so they could best serve the country politically. She made some excellent points in her address.

After this address it was voted to form a Women's Republican Club and as a memorial to the late president, to name the same the Women's Harding Republican Club o Ulster County.

The following nominating committee was then appointed by Miss Roberts: Miss Hary Haldane (representing her sister, Mrs. Francis J. Higginson, as Miss Haldane is not an Ulster county voter), Mrs. J. H. Heaton, Clintondale; Mrs. J. A. Paton, Wallkill; Mrs. John Pratt, Highland.

Before the meeting adjourned for luncheon at the Stuyvesant Mrs. Norris regional director, gave a few moments' very informing talk on technicalities of the caucus, direct primary, etc.

The following women attended the morning meeting and accepted the invitation to lunch: Mrs. Harcourt J. Pratt, Highland, Mrs. Philip Schantz, Highland; Mrs. J. N. Freston, Highland; Mrs. E. H. Taylor, Port Ewen; Mrs. Elsie H. Groves, Kingston; Mrs. Edgar Shultis, Kingston; Mrs. Grant Cole, Kingston; Mrs. Ernest Clapp, New Paltz; Mrs. W. Harry Huling, New Paltz; Mrs. Joseph P. LeFevre, New Paltz; Miss Cornelia E. DuBois, New Paltz; Mrs. John Steinert, Kingston; Etta Hendricks, Kingston; Anna B. Hoey, Kingston; Mrs. Sarah C. Pratt, Highland; Mrs. J. R. Planet With a 15-Hour Day.

On the planet Uranus, heavenly bodies rise in the west and set in the east. Its day is only 15 hours long.

The frigid zones on the earth extend 23½ degrees from the poles. On Uranus these poles are 84 degrees and extend almost to the equator. Thus as the planet pursues one of its huge 86-year long years about the sun, half the planet will be shrouded in unbroken darkness while the other side will have daylight without break.

Every Piano an Engineering Job.

The supporting structure for the strings of a piano, notes the Scientific American, involves a very careful engineering design in order that it may withstand the tension of the strings, providing perfect stability under all temperature conditions so that the piano will not get out of tune. The total tension of all these strings in a standard piano is between 25,000 and 50,000 pounds.

Mistakes Are Hateful.

A woman forgets the lovers she has dismissed as quickly as possible. Their memory is hateful to her, like the memory of all mistakes.

Life would be so much simpler if we'd all make up our minds that what other people think about us does not signify in the least. It's only permitting it to signify that permits it to exist.—From "Black Oxen," by Gertrude Atherton.

Roman "Taxicab" Discovered.

HIS LITTLE PAL

By LAURA M. WILLIAMS

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

TEDDY COURTLAND came into my room looking the glummest I had ever seen him.

"Well, what is it?" I asked. "Some helpless little woman—"

"Oh, well," he said, hesitating a bit. "I'll tell you. Shows how clever women are. Some time ago I had a friend. She used to scold me about cigarette smoking, lectured me on saving money and laughed at my jokes. A girl has to be a pretty good pal to do that."

"She has," I agreed maliciously.

"Well, things went on with us. She got a place as a teacher. I used to josh her about becoming a blue-stocking and then sent her out a box of candy as a peace offering afterward. I got a chance to go South for my firm. I said good-by to her in the reception room of the stuffy old school where she had placed herself.

"Of course we wrote a little. I sent her a few cards and some hasty notes, but after a time she didn't write me at all. I was away 18 months. When I got back I didn't get out to see her right away. In fact, I had been home some ten days or so when I turned my car in her direction.

"She was glad to see me. She looked like a woman who had cried a great deal. Her mouth quivered when she smiled.

"I said, 'Tell me all about it—everything.'

"She couldn't speak. Meg at a loss for words! Something had happened.

"'Something is troubling me,' she said, after a while. 'I didn't think you would notice.'

"'I'm not so dense as you think me,' I said. 'Out with it. I'm not broke yet.'

"She flushed. 'It isn't money—I guess it's—love, Teddy.'

"She wasn't the sentimental type. It had gone deep with her. She told me the whole story. It seems she had fallen in love with some fellow. He sent her a few gifts, candy, and so on, but he didn't seem to want to marry her. Selfish enough to tell her his business troubles, monopolize her time, get all her thoughts centered on him and then never ask her the final question. She asked me to help her. Her plan was very simple. She would be out with me the next time he called.

"I took her to a show. I was a little worried we were in for a melancholy sort of time, but Meg didn't mean the thought of him should spoil my pleasure.

"After this we had many evenings together. I sent her flowers and candy. I even wrote her a few ardent notes. So imbued with the success of her plan was I, that I suggested she drop the notes where he might find them.

"I used to search her face. No luck. She would shake her head, look as if she were going to cry.

"This kept on all summer and the fellow hadn't spoken, so finally I said, 'This can't go on.' She nearly sprang out of the machine. 'Let me speak to him. We've been playing this game long enough.'

"'You've been very kind,' she answered. 'I suppose you're tired of it.'

"'Is there someone else?' I asked. I didn't mean to raise a doubt of Meg in her mind and told her so, but she was a little dismayed and the day wasn't a success.

"Well, one day when I called for her she said it was all right. 'I shall never forget the wonderful time you've given me. I'm so grateful to you, Teddy.'

"I'd been wanting that idiot to propose for months. Now that it was settled I was terribly taken aback. Don't know what I said—stammered something about luck, and stood holding her hand and staring like a fool. She was white and I could see she had been crying.

"'A woman always cries when she is happy,' she said, though I hadn't spoken. 'This is good-by. All sorts of luck and happiness to you. Don't quite forget me. I've resigned my position. I—we'll live West. I'll say good-by now.'

"'Aren't you having me to the wedding?' I gasped.

"She told me there wasn't to be a wedding. She was just going West. Wanted nothing to do with me now. Didn't think I was going to miss her. Woman-like, didn't care probably. She leaves tomorrow. Poor girl. I hope he's good to her."

"Who is going to be good to her?" I shouted. "You bet you'll miss her. She's probably ready to kill herself. Going West? You chump! You're a great pal. Why didn't you make love to her? That's what she wanted."

"The girl trusted me," he began stiffly. "I've honor—"

"But no sense. Did you ever see this other man? Did you ever see a letter, a photograph? No! You're the man. You're your own rival. Her poor little scheme didn't work. There never was anybody else. Probably never will be. She'll pine to death somewhere."

He sprang up. "Do you think that—"

"Think it! I know it. Didn't she grow younger and prettier? Wasn't she flushing and laughing with you? Didn't her eyes shine? There were hundred signs. Anyone but a blind would have known. Women are queer little creatures. She loves you and she's done her best to wake you up. She's failed. You blind, foolish—"

But he had gone. I got up to watch his long figure running through the heavy rain, beckoning wildly a waiting taxicab at the farther corner.

No Need for Further Call.

Little Katherine was visiting an aunt in the country and one morning while she and her cousin were dressing, chanticleer crowed long and loud near the house. Katherine rushed to the window and shouted, "Never mind us, Mr. Rooster! We're up."

FITZGERALD HURLS CLERMONTS TO VICTORY

Monday evening at the Athletic Field the Clermonts took the Young Wiltwyck baseball team into camp by the score of 8-0. Fitzgerald, pitcher of the Clermonts, allowed but two hits. This is the first shutout the Clermonts have scored this season. The Clermont catcher, Shultz, proved effective at the bat by getting four hits out of four times at bat, three being doubles. One of these doubles came in the fourth while Guy Meyers, who pitched No. 5 School to championship over No. 3 two years ago, was in the box for the Wiltwycks. On Thursday evening the Clermonts go to Port Ewen to play the Junior Rangers of that place. This team was beaten by the Clermonts on Fourth of July night by the score of 20-1. This team has been strengthened greatly since the last game. The battery for Wiltwycks, Williams, J. Meyers, G. Meyers, p.; Stilman, c. The lineup of Clermonts, Rosenwieg, 1b.; Lewis, ss.; Fitzgerald, p.; Shultz, c.; Boohn, 3b.; F. Bruhn, 2b.; J. Misove, lf.; Keator, cf.; J. Houghtaling, rf. The Clermonts would like to play the Emeralds on Tuesday evening next week. If any team desires games phone 1003-W.

Vital Difference.

One difference between the attire of men and women is that men's clothes are made to put on, women's to show off.

MASONS MOURN FOR HARDING

All Masonic lodges in New York state have received the following communication:

GRAND LODGE, F. & A. M.
Office of the Grand Master of Masons,
In the State of New York.
August 6th, 1923.

Brethren:

Warren G. Harding, president of the United States and a member of Marion Lodge, No. 70, of Marion, Ohio, died at San Francisco, California, on August 2d 1923.

A kingly man in the height of his usefulness and the zenith of his fame and an exemplar of our Craft has fallen. America is bowed in sorrow. The world mourns the loss of a great and good man. All peoples, irrespective of race or creed, deplore his death. He consistently taught the doctines, and exemplified the spirit of Masonry, the spirit of fraternity and brotherhood, the spirit of toleration, charity, peace and good will, and manifested that spirit by a life of loving and useful service.

The president of the United States has designated Friday, August 10th, upon which day the obsequies of our beloved brother are to be held, as a day of mourning and prayer. Let this day be so observed by the Craft.

Sincerely and fraternally yours,
ARTHUR S. TOMPKINS,
Grand Master.

By the Grand Master,
Robt. Judson Kenworthy,
Grand Secretary.

Can Make Flower Scents.

Nearly all flower scents can be successfully imitated by judicious blending of artificial odors. That of the jasmine is the most notable exception.

NO GAME TODAY; STAMFORD DONE

There will be no game at the Fair Grounds this afternoon due to the fact that the Stamford team this morning at 11 o'clock decided to disband for the season. Manager Brown received notice to this effect at noon today. The reason for the Stamford team disbanding is the fact that they have not been winning any games and as a result have failed to obtain the support of the fans in that vicinity.

JONES ACT BOOKED FOR EXPOSITION

Another act has been booked for the Kingston Exposition which will be held at the Kingston Fair Grounds, Inc., on August 27-September 1, an exceptionally clever one. It is the Jones Brothers, Hank and Al, in a novelty hand-to-hand balancing act. This act has been playing independent vaudeville in only the large cities, where it has met with great success.

The Jones Brothers are making Kingston their home, being residents of Sterling street.

Their act is said to be a genuine muscle developer and requires some nerve to perform. The act will be given three nights at the Exposition.

ENFORCEMENT MEN IN SURPRISE RAID AT HUDSON.

Prohibition enforcement agents directed by Marc Buckland, Albany dry chief, Tuesday made five raids in Hudson and seized a large quantity of alleged whiskey, gin and wine. The enforcement men appeared in the five places almost simultaneously and made arrests at each place.

TANNERSVILLE FORGES AHEAD

In Series With Colonials by Taking 5-2 Game at the Fair Grounds on Tuesday Night—Warhop in Box for Local Club—Deetjen Pitches for Tannersville—Two Homers.

Dolan, Lackey & Co. have at last forged ahead in the series between their combination of ball tossers and the Colonials.

Tuesday evening at the Fair Grounds they handed the Colonials a 5-2 trimming. They deserved to win the game. They outhit the Colonials 10-7 and were somewhat snappier on the field than the local aggregation.

Warhop was in the box for the Colonials. For about four innings, the ex-Yankee, had the Tannersville outfit standing on their heads but towards the last of the game he seemed to weaken somewhat and then Tannersville began to push over the runs. The forty-two year old gentleman had perfect control at all times and did not walk one man during the game. He retired six of the mountain players by the strike out route.

Deetjen, ex-Wesleyan University pitcher, was on the mound for Tannersville and he allowed five hits all of which he kept well scattered. Deetjen was rather wild at times and walked four men. He had seven strike outs to his credit.

Two Homers.

Two home runs were made during the game. The first one came in the sixth inning and was made by Home Run Herbst. Kelly seems to delight in making home runs on the local grounds. Raskin got on first ahead of him by hitting to center field so that the four base clout was a decided help to the mountain outfit.

The second clout came in the eighth inning and was made by "Chad" See over the right field fence, this being the same fence that Herbst's clout had gone over. However "Chad's" clout was not quite as valuable as the one made by the D. & H. player as there did not happen to be any one on the bags at the time.

Fans Held in Suspense.

The game Tuesday was of the type that holds the fans in suspense at all times. The runs didn't come all at once and there was a chance for both teams to score in practically every inning towards the last of the contest. Furthermore with such an aggregation of sluggers as the Colonials had in their lineup they were liable to start a fusillade at any time.

The fans were all on their toes in the ninth inning when it looked for a few minutes as though the Colonials might start one of those ninth inning rallies. Coyle was the first man up but struck out. Then Robins came through with a hit to left field but he was thrown out at second when Shorty, batting for Russell, hit to the third baseman. Then Schwab, batting for Warhop, hit to right field and it looked again as though the Colonials might yet be able to push over a few runs. However the bubble blew up when Matty Deegan, the next man up, after working the count on him up to 2-2 and hitting a lot of foul tips, finally struck out.

Colonials Score in the First.

The Colonials scored in the very first inning when See got on first on a fielder's choice, was advanced to third on a hit by McCue, and was brought in home on a hit to left field by Dahn.

Tannersville Scores One in Fourth.

A double by Dugan and a single by Herbst in the fourth inning gave Tannersville their first tally.

Four in Next Three Innings.

The mountainers then proceeded to score four more runs in the next three innings. Hits by Strenk and Alexander, and an error by Robins gave Dolan, Lackey & Co. one more in the fifth inning. In the sixth inning along came that home run with one on which gave them two more tallies. An error on the part of See, a sacrifice, and a double by Alexander, pushed one more over the rubber in the seventh.

One Cor Locals in Eighth.

The local team got one more run in the eighth due to See's home run.

ALLABEN.

Allaben, Aug. 8. Mrs. George Steinmetz gave a pit party last Thursday evening at Bixby. Her guests were Miss Margaret Wall, Miss Olga Brother, Helen Banks, Ruth Davis, Anna Riccio and Mr. and Mrs. Steinmetz. Margaret Wall won the pit game, and after refreshments the guests departed, all leaving enjoyed a wonderful evening.

Mrs. Charles Burkhart has a crowded boarding house, where many very enjoyable parties take place.

Miss Helen Banks is a guest of her sister, Mrs. Barnett Blakeslee.

Mr. and Mrs. George Steinmetz and Ruth motored to Pennsylvania last Monday.

Mrs. Charles Blakeslee has a crowded boarding house.

TAGGING ALL THE BASES IN THE BIG LEAGUES

The Giants hit Luque and Luque hit Stengel, but the former counted in the club's standing and the latter didn't—score 6 to 2. It was the fifth straight for the champions over the Reds and the first between Luque and Stengel, the scuffle coming when the senior retired from the box, by request, in the eighth.

The Phils made it three out of four by beating the Pirates again, 7 to 5, Williams socking his twenty-ninth homer with two on.

Manhandling three Senatorial pitchers for twenty-six hits, the Indians establish a season's record by winning, 22 to 2.

The Browns won a go-as-you-please from the Yankees, 12 to 10, a six run rally in the sixth d[oing] [the] assist, if any.

Led by Hale, who socked a [home] and two singles, the Athletics [won] again from the White Sox, 8 to [7], Congress being the victim.

The Cardinals finally managed to "take" the Braves, 4 to 3, the hitting of Bottomley and Mueller being instrumental.

Coolidge Collected Bill.

Attorney Henry Klein of Fair street has a letter which he received in June, 1914, from Calvin Coolidge, now president of the United States, when the president was practicing law at Northampton, Mass., in which acknowledgment is made and thanks expressed for a favor in the sending of a bill for collection. Coolidge collected the account for Attorney Klein.
